Carmel doctor wrote a song for Lady Liberty

By MAC McDONALD

YOU KNOW he has a love for America, the flag and the Statue of Liberty when you ring the doorbell at his Carmel home; it chimes the Star Spangled Banner.

But you don't realize how deep it goes until you find out that Dr. Antoine DaVigo not only has written a song entitled Miss Liberty especially for the statue's centennial, but that on the Fourth of July he will be a robust 80 years old.

He's also offering copies of the song free to anyone who wants them, in celebration not only of his own birthday, but our country and The Lady's as well.

"I've always had the Statue of Liberty in my heart," said the vigorous DaVigo, who has twice the energy of men half his age. "When I found out that that they were going to have a big Liberty fair in New York, I said, 'I've got to do a song for her.' It's a very hot number, my pride and joy."

DaVigo, who has lived with his wife in Carmel for 17 years, first set eyes on the famous statue when he was only 7 years old. That was 1913 and he was with his parents, still on the boat that had sailed from his birthplace, French Algiers; they were among the thousands of immigrants looking for renewed hope and opportunity in the Land of Opportunity.

"My father told me there was such a thing (the statue) and I became interested," said DaVigo, standing in what he calls the "music corner" of his immaculately appointed home. "When I first saw the statue I was completely overcome by it, not only by its sheer beauty, but because it meant that we had arrived...in America. The new mother of hope."

It was his first, and most lasting, impression of the New World.

Miss Liberty isn't the first song he's written — he's written songs for the cities of Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove — but it is the one he is the most proud of. "Probably the best thing written in this century for

Undefined change

Dear Editor:

Carmel City Council's special budget session has several items that ought to concern Carmel residents. The Carmel Business Association has requested a grant of $7,500. Carmel has never felt the need to support a Chamber of Commerce though the Business Association has acted on its own in this capacity. Why this request now?

Carmel is beginning to realize that the "change" spoken of during its mayoral campaign was never very clearly defined but what the city is getting now isn't certainly what it had in mind. A committee chairman appointed by the mayor to check out the General Plan stated recently that to him Ocean Avenue looks about the same but the people somehow look "different." What he didn't see was the relationship between the tourist and the kind and quality of the merchandise sought for on Ocean Avenue. Increasing tawdriness, more and more T-shirts, more bad taste, more traffic of all kinds, and more bad publicity as a result of it all.

Carmel residents have never been in favor of unlimited business nor of overwhelming numbers of tourists coming to town for the wrong reason. Now we find ourselves trying to fight an almost boom town and boardwalk fascination our new visitors have.

There doesn't seem to be much that Clint Eastwood and the Carmel Business Association want that they don't get. As Carmel in its past has not felt the need for publicizing itself, under present circumstances it most certainly doesn't feel the need to do it now.

(It's never too late to speak up, however, and a word to the council, even a telephone call to city hall will help to make your point.)

Cleaning house

Dear Editor:

I was startled when I read an issue of your fine paper to discover that some people had castigated Mayor Clint Eastwood for his "firing" of some of the Planning Commission.

I was particularly startled because most people who keep up with Carmel news have felt that this should have been done years ago.

Don't the others realize that Carmel has often been the laughingstock when word of the doings of the Planning Commission have leaked out?

Their arrogance, their presumption, their "holier than thou" attitude have not served the city of Carmel well at all. Their punitive methods and treatment amounting almost to nepotism caused all thinking persons to know that a change was necessary and inevitable, and also— with the previous mayor— impossible.

Now, I say, congratulations to Mayor Clint Eastwood and those members of his council who had the courage to vote with him! They knew that this sort of house cleaning might "look" as though personalities and individual preferences and even personal differences were involved.

But, the truth is that it was time to clean house and Mayor Eastwood did it. Congratulations!

Constant change

Dear Editor:

There is only one constant and that is change. This change can be dramatic and uncontrollable such as the forest fires in Big Sur, or it can be slow and gentle as the erosion along a streambed. Man finds himself in conflict with these changes of the natural environment and attempts to forestall or prevent them; he becomes the conservator or the protector of the status quo.

Man is also the originator of change or control over nature, not as the conservator, but the initiator. The road builder, the dam builder, the forester, the farmer, all contribute to change that is quite often in opposition to nature's order. Thus, you have man, the conservator, trying to prevent changes in nature, such as river bank control, or man the builder deliberately changing nature, such as the dam builder. This dichotomy of man's outlook on change creates a great stress on the growth factors that are part of the process.

If change is an inevitable part of life, then the question is not preventing change but controlling it to produce a good quality of life with the least damage to the natural environment. This quality of life has to reach a balance of providing a good environment in which people can live and at the same time be in balance with nature.

We'll miss Leah

Dear Editor:

The feeling of loss is always great when a loved one passes on, but even greater when the person has become an institution.

That's what Leah Eschen was for us at the Carmel Inn where she "held court" every day in her favorite chair facing the big picture window, smiling and waving to all passersby, mostly the many friends she had made in her 97 years.

It was a daily ritual for a few faithful admirers to stop in with flowers or candy just to soak up some of the wisdom from those twinkling eyes and sharp wit that were her trademarks.

This was a lady who was always "Just fine, dear" or "I couldn't be better" who never complained and would scold you if she felt you were giving her too much attention.

She didn't talk much, took care of her own business, was in good physical health and was always quick to laugh. As my great-grandfather would have said, "That's the kind of woman you move West with, son."

We'll miss you, Leah. You were an inspiration to us all and we are better for having known you.

Inconsiderate parkers

Editor:

As an office worker in Carmel I certainly appreciate the 40 new parking spaces on the corner of Fifth and Dolores.

However, I do not appreciate the people who make their own spaces, blocking exits and making it very difficult to leave, even at 5 o'clock, but especially during the working day. Maybe if the police could patrol the area and ticket the offenders, these people would think twice before being so inconsiderate.

Hang together

THE MYSTERY about this whole issue of the proposed "federalization" of Big Sur is not so much that Sen. Pete Wilson wants to "preserve and protect" Big Sur — who doesn't? — but that he persists in his desire to ram the bill through Congress despite overwhelming opposition from residents, landowners, businessmen, environmentalists and politicians on the Central Coast.

Have our strong and vocal pleas fallen on deaf — or perhaps uncaring — ears?

What is also mystifying is that Sen. Alan Cranston, whose own attempts to push through a federalization bill several years ago were rebuffed, also persists in supporting Wilson on this vague and ill-advised bill, one that has the potential to alter the face of the Big Sur coast forever.

As noted by several speakers at a barbecue in Big Sur last month, with both senators supporting the bill, chances of it getting approval in the Senate are unfortunately very good. The other senators apparently assume that if both the Republican and Democrat support a particular bill, then it must have some kind of across-the-board acceptance from all over the state. Nothing could be further from the truth.

If anything, Wilson's bill has generated across-the-board opposition, not only to the bill itself, but to Wilson (and Cranston's) obstinacy and unwillingness to listen to the people who will be affected the most by this bill.

As for a coalition of residents, businesses, landowners, environmentalists and government officials that has been formed by Rep. Leon Panetta, Wilson could only offer an insipid "we're-willing-to-consider-it" reply. Cranston meanwhile has been relatively silent on the whole issue; perhaps he's too busy backpedaling, letting Wilson take all the heat, of which there is a considerable amount.

With Cranston still in the picture, however slightly, and defeat in the Senate unlikely, it's now up to Panetta to try and stop the bill from advancing through the House of Representatives. As Panetta hinself said, "The most important thing we can do is to hang together."

The bill gets its first committee review July 31 in Washington D.C.; fund-raising efforts are now underway to send a contingent to our nation's capitol. We should do everything we can to have our voices heard there, because apparently they're not being heard here in California.

We may just need to speak a little louder.

Restore the puzzle!

Dear Editor:

Sorry, I have a few cross words for you. But first, some praise. Your paper scintillates. You cover the local scene magnificently. Your columnists are superb. The classified ads sparkle. HOWEVER, please recognize that the weekly crossword keeps readers occupied beyond the normal perusal time of a free paper. (Hallelujah for the free!)

For two weeks now we hardcore X-word fans have been denied our weekly fix. I'm sure you don't want us to get the mayor involved. So make our week. Restore the puzzle!

He must be supported

Dear Editor:

Though Mr. Eastwood won a resounding victory in his bid for mayor we all realized that there was a small minority out there against him and to expect retaliation.

However, when I read of Mr. E being accused of a personal vendetta in regard to the planning commission, I must say "for shame!" We have an official with the "intestinal fortitude" to stand up and say what so many people have said— these people were unqualified. He must be supported.

Carmel is such a tiny spot that great care must be taken to keep it as we all desire: just a few mistakes are too apparent. We have at least a dozen retired architects and at least 2,371 artists that could direct us onto the path of beauty. Why don't we use them?

Mr. E has made a start in that direction.

Way back in January of 1985 I wrote to The Pine Cone to comment on the planning commission being surprised that the Cottage Shops were too "cutesie-wootsie" and that the chimneys were too big; they did not know what they were looking at when the plans were up for approval.

Then there is that "Mayan-incan" office down below Ocean. Must have been someone from the Beverly Hills Commission.

Mr. Eastwood must be supported in his efforts to combine progress with maintaining the beauty of Carmel. It has been a very short time.

Bus 'shelter'

Dear Editor:

I sympathize with the wet senior citizen mentioned in the local daily. The main responsibility for this is not with Monterey-Salinas Transit. I know by sad experience that the oft-vandalized bus shelter under the trees is, on every rainy day, overfilled with high school students who play their unbearably loud radios (sometimes each one playing a different noise at the same time), stamping on the seats with their muddy feet, polluting the atmosphere with more or less legal smoke, and otherwise making the premises useless to other people. Thus, bus riders have either to stand or use the unroofed seats provided by the city of Monterey.

Pigeon droppings are just part of the unesthetic, unsanitary situation. Much uglier and just as unhealthy is the litter provided by fatherless bipeds who should know better and use the numerous garbage cans provided.

A friend suggested that MST should hire a security guard. The city of Monterey should have the police patrol the plaza frequently when high school lets out and at night.

When MST provides new shelters, the backs of the benches should be provided with some sort of molding which makes it uncomfortable to sit on them while resting one's dirty feet on the seat. Stained clothes, demanding an extra visit to the laundromat, can be a hardship to some senior citizens or other low-income persons.

Library annex issue delayed

City council holds another marathon session

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE NEW Carmel City Council is quickly finding out that projects will not always go as smooth as Election Day and that meetings sometimes seem longer than the campaign.

A six-hour marathon session Tuesday produced more continuances than action on several key issues. The council:

- Postponed by one month a decision on the joint parking garage with Pine Inn.
- Postponed a decision on the proposed Harrison Memorial Library annex and asked the new library board to develop a recommendation.
- Asked the planning commission for a recommendation on the design and location of restrooms in Piccadilly Park. Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo, who didn't want to spend the estimated $44,000; and Councilman James Wright, who believes the park is too small for restrooms, opposed the motion.
- Referred to the Cultural Commission a proposal for a sculpture garden at Picadilly Park and suggested that artists try to develop a matching grant proposal rather than ask the city to pay the estimated $48,000 price tag. There also was an indication artists may be willing to donate their work.
- Re-appointed the five planning commissioners who had been serving on a temporary basis after the former commission had been terminated.
- Approved an agreement with the Carmel Youth Center Board of Directors that will give the city a greater role in the activities there. A full-time city recreation director will be hired to oversee the activities.
- Agreed to a contract that will give the Carmel Foundation seven months to develop a proposal to finance, build and maintain senior citizen housing units on the Dolores Street site now being used as a temporary parking lot.
- Directed staff to prepare the necessary resolutions to "ordain" the recreation committee as a commission.
- Announced it will accept applications for appointment as the city representative to the Hatton Canyon Freeway advisory committee.
- Appointed Cultural Commissioner Lewis Heniford as the council's representative to the local advisory board of the Frohman Academy.
- Unanimously rejected a proposal for a bicycle race through downtown Carmel in September over concerns about the expected 25,000 spectators.
- Heard complaints from several artists that local galleries were fraudulently selling replicas and copies as originals. Eastwood said he would personally investigate the matter and Freeman is to look into the legalities.
- Agreed to a contract with the Carmel Business Association. The contract stipulates services the CBA is to provide in return for a $7,500 grant.

THE COUNCIL session once again was played before a full house and long lines in front of city hall.

The city admitted residents first and also set aside seats for those wanting to address a particular agenda item. In addition, a video monitor and seating were available on the patio.

Howard Nieman complained to the council, raising concerns that the priority system and refusal to move to larger quarters violated the spirit of the Open Meeting Act.

Nieman, who had written two lengthy letters to Freeman citing specific provisions of the Open Meeting Act, had gone so far as to request the district attorney to investigate the alleged violations.

Nieman also was angered when at the last council meeting the police department asked

General plan review committee report loosens the reins

By MICHAEL GARDNER

THE CARMEL General Plan Review Committee has been given a new lease and will proceed with its work that is expected to lead to a loosening of city restrictions on business and residential development.

The city council on a 4-1 vote Tuesday accepted an interim report drafted by committee Chairman Robert Evans and permitted the advisory board to develop specific recommendations on revisions to the general plan and its implementing ordinances.

However, the committee and its 17-page interim report did not escape the council chambers easily.

After Mayor Clint Eastwood called the report "terrific" and a "good start," Councilman James Wright made a series of comments that questioned the scope of the committee's work and its statements that public input was taken into account in developing the recommendations.

Wright, who dissented on the vote, pointed out that the council had not directed the committee to work on implementing ordinances — a job he believes is better left to staff and the planning commission.

Wright also said that the council directive specifically said that the committee develop recommendations to "simplify and clarify" the general plan. If the committee had followed that directive, its work should have been completed by now.

He called "inferences" that public comments were included "misleading," and questioned whether, as the committee proposes, staff time should be diverted from the planning commission to help work on the revisions.

Eastwood said he attended several of the meetings and the public always was allowed to participate.

Wright responded that the public just asked questions, but was never allowed input, such as opinions on the proposed revisions.

Evans then got up and told the council, "We were not under obligation to include public input...A good many of them were hostile to what we were doing and are not included."

Councilwoman Helen Arnold said one member of the audience was told by the committee that it was not a public hearing and would not be allowed to speak.

Councilman Bob Fischer agreed with Wright that there are provisions in the interim plan that may not be acceptable to the council. However, "it is not binding. It's ideas," he said.

ARNOLD WAS critical of the interim report.

"I was appalled, really, at some of the suggestions...The philosophy of the general plan is under great stress and strain. That shocked me. I couldn't believe five sane people could issue such a report and stand behind it," she said.

Arnold said she called three of the committee members and found "quite a dissension of opinion," yet the report is issued as a committee statement.

(The committee has said that the report is just a consensus and that not all members agree with each provision.)

After committee member Olof Dahlstrand briefly spoke, Eastwood ribbed Arnold's earlier comment by telling Dahlstrand that, "you look sane to me."

Former Mayor Gunner Norberg said it is "completely ridiculous" to consider the general plan without also reviewing its implementing ordinances.

"Those implementing ordinances are what raise Hell," Norberg said.

Attorney Clyde Sturges gave an impassioned speech about how the current plan has a "cavalier disregard for people and property" and is a "brazen interference of government."

He also questioned why the city is building senior citizen housing when there is a great demand for affordable homes for young people.

Sturges also chastised the city for its proposed ordinance on second kitchens, which he called "Gestapo" — borrowing from one of Eastwood's favorite campaign phrases. The past council had considered but never accepted the second kitchen ordinance.

Wright said that he had written two memos — one as a planning commissioner and the other as a councilman — that outlines the "dilemma" of second kitchens.

One such dilemma is whether the city can say that the second kitchens meet its "fair share" low-cost housing requirement if there is no monitoring of rents, he said.

The memos do not suggest rent control, Wright said.

Eastwood, reiterating his "Gestapo" ordinance campaign slogan, looked at Wright and said, "I'm very thankful to you...It was a great tool in my winning the election."

Following the discussion, the council authorized the committee to continue its work. The committee meets at 3:30 p.m. Fridays at city hall. The sessions are open to the public.

Key points in the interim report include:

- "The general plan is excessively pessimistic. After finding many things wrong with Carmel, it advocates solutions that in essence would place still further restrictions on the already-restricted rights of residents.
- "Down zoning of property, especially where the zoning has existed for decades, can only be justified when a massive public benefit can be shown: both the general plan and the ordinances fail to meet this test.
- "The general plan state more positively that the city provide parking facilities at Sunset Center and elsewhere, subject to a satisfactory plan of financing. It should also be recognized that the obligation to provide and pay for parking is not solely that of the business district nor of the city.
- "We see no need to pursue any city action to build, buy or subsidize public housing.
- "Residential design review serves no useful purpose which cannot be better achieved and more easily managed through the former system of limits on height, floor area, setbacks and land coverage.
- "Proposed regulations for second kitchens (should be) modified to the point where owners will actually seek legalization.
- "It may be desirable to eliminate (the significant buildings) element. If there are overriding reasons for its retention, it should be recast in much simpler form.
- "We urge the support for the concept of a new San Clemente dam.
- "Specific plans...thwart property owners in the development of long-established legal lots.
- "The beach walkway as now proposed has already raised serious questions concerning total cost and major loss of parking."

THE COMMITTEE assails the general plan and its accompanying environmental impact report (EIR) throughout its 17 pages of recommendations to the council.

"With the enabling ordinances, it (the general plan) creates financial loss for some residential and commercial property owners; some immediate, others long term.

"The philosophy behind the plan is best reflected in its failure throughout 140 pages to recognize the need to increase water supplies and improve water quality, but instead uses water shortages as a justification for restrictions."

The committee criticizes using the 1982 questionnaire as a basis for many of the general plan provisions. It is pointed out that less than half of Carmel residents responded to the survey and many of the questions did not provide background information.

"Questionnaires are a tricky business. While this one should not be disregarded, neither is it irrefutable proof of resident attitudes on all points. Another vital consideration is that government at all levels has an obligation to protect the rights of minorities against excessive infringement by majorities."

The committee's report reviews each element of the general plan and includes recommendations as well as critiques.

On the land use element, the committee does not believe residents are forced to shop outside the city limits. It describes the attitude that the city needs more resident-oriented business as "utterly fallacious."

"Nearly all types of goods and services are available in Carmel, except those forbidden by law. Residents travel outside for price, convienence, variety and parking.

"There is no place in Carmel stores like Safeway's, Long's or Monte Mart, but they are part of greater Carmel and attract people to peripheral businesses. The plan should not suggest that we can alter this situation."

Addressing Ocean Avenue specifically, the committee report states, "No doubt some resident-oriented stores have been lost, but the overall quality of Ocean Avenue has not deteriorated to the extent suggested. The type of visitor has changed, but we live in a changing world of changing tastes."

The committee also expressed reservations about ordinance 84-14, which places severe restrictions on business. It suggests major revisions and specifically recommends that the city revert to its pre-1983 zoning.

A MAJOR complaint about the general plan enabling ordinances is that it downzoned several properties to create a buffer district between resident and commercial uses.

On the housing element, the committee is critical of income figures used to justify its "fair share" in meeting low and moderate-cost housing.

The committee believes that legalized second kitchens will meet the city's housing goals rather than building a senior citizen complex on Dolores Street.

"What has been negotiated at Dolores and Fifth in the name of affordable senior housing would benefit only one-half of 1 percent of our population, a drop in the bucket if needed, enormously expensive if not," the report states.

The committee recommends that the city explore conversion of hotels in the residential zone to provide moderate income housing and residents for seniors.

The committee is equally critical of ordinance 85-18, which established a "building envelope" and design review for new residences.

"The delightful character of R-1 is likely due to this freedom (from design controls), resulting in a wide variety of form, shapes, materials and style which can only flourish in an atmosphere of freedom from government intrusion."

The committee believes that the former system that just restricted height, setbacks, floor area and land coverage serves a better purpose.

The committee, however, does not recommend abandoning design review of commercial structures.

In addition to the general plan, the commttee is critical of the accompanying environmental impact report.

Points made concerning the EIR include:

• "The accomplishments under land use are full of unrealistic hopes; for even part of them to be achieved would require a regimentation of the business district that raises concern for due process versus government by edict. It is characterized by an almost complete disregard for economic factors.

• "The housing section anticipates an increased supply of low and moderate cost housing, but since economic factors and the city's own restrictions are a deterrent, presumably this will be mainly achieved through legalization of second kitchens. Other results would be obtainable only through questionable zoning and design restrictions.

Possible phone scam moves into the Carmel area

CARMEL POLICE Detective Pete Poitras warns that a possible telephone scam involving requests for credit card numbers has been reported in Carmel.

Police have received several reports of a Los Angeles firm telephoning residents to say they have won a valuable prize. But the catch is the company needs the winner's credit card number to receive the prize.

Poitras became concerned after he checked into the firm and found that it is just a post office box number.

There are scams where credit card numbers obtained through calls of this nature are used to order merchandise over the phone, Poitras reported.

"That goes on all the time in Los Angeles," he said.

Poitras warns residents not to ever give out their credit card number over the telephone.

For more information, call Poitras at 624-6403.

Board allocates lottery funds

THE CARMEL Unified School District Board of Education July 1 allocated its anticipated monies from the California State Lottery and hired a new school psychologist, Stuart McDowell of Santa Ana.

The board also ratified the appointment of Karl Pallastrini as the principal of Carmel Middle School and Sharron Douglas as principal of River School.

An estimated income of $547,000 from the state lottery was budgeted unanimously by the board, giving the largest chunk of $180,000 to a contingency fund. It is expected to provide for staff salaries.

Another $160,000 was allocated to the purchase of new school buses and $25,000 to staff development. Staff development, the report states, includes activities for certificated and classified personnel.

School libraries were given $50,000 to update their collections, and instructional equipment, which includes anything used in the classroom, received $40,000. An additional $77,000 was given for non-instructional equipment which includes anything used for school maintenance and equipment not used in the classroom.

The board also approved the recommendation of District Psychologist Marvin Biasotti to change his position to director of pupil services, hire a new school psychologist, and reorganize the counseling and administrative services. The change will cost the district approximately $9,000 a year.

Biasotti explained the new arrangement will allow the district to do much of its own counseling and testing, two functions it had designated primarily to outside services. His new position would be in place of hiring a new assistant superintendent.

It would also allow the district to utilize $15,000 in state funds in a more productive manner, he told the board.

City council postpones library annex decision for identification before admission was granted to city hall.

Eastwood, whose popularity as a movie star is the obvious reason behind the large crowds, asked for Nieman and Carmel residents to "bear with us."

"We're sort of feeling our way...We'd like, if possible, for citizens to bear with us for another meeting or so," Eastwood said.

Eastwood admitted that if the crowds continue to swell then the council may have to move to Sunset Center. "If you will be so kind as to bear with us for another meeting or so, I guarantee you something will happen."

Wright, however, thought the council should do the opposite. He said the city should move to a bigger room now that the crowds are large and then move back to city hall if the end of the summer tourist season also spells an end to the throngs waiting to get inside the meetings.

Laiolo obviously was perturbed by the suggestion to move, and pointed out that the city has not received a single formal complaint.

"You have mine," said Nieman, who asked that the council adopt a written admissions policy.

Freeman said he will contact the attorney general over the issue, but did not feel that a written policy is required.

The council also made it clear that it had no intentions of continuing the identification requirement of the last meeting.

Nieman told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Wednesday morning that he is satisfied enough with the results that he will withdraw for now his complaint to the district attorney.

However, he said he will refile the complaint if the situation continues much longer.

EASTWOOD, who during the campaign chastized the former council for its delays of projects, is finding quick action an elusive goal.

The council was forced to postpone action on the proposed Pine Inn-city parking garage because the consultant's cost estimates did not arrive in time for an agreement to be developed between the two parties.

The latest figures estimate that a two-story, 96-space underground parking garage will cost an estimated $1.25 million.

With the numbers in hand, staff now will negotiate with Pine Inn on who should pay how much. Those negotiations will be reported back at the August meeting.

Since the underground parking garage was postponed, the city had little choice but to also continue discussion of the proposed $905,000 library annex. The annex would be developed on top of the parking garage on the northwest corner of Lincoln Street and Sixth Avenue.

Wright did try to get the council to reach a consensus on the annex because it had been stalled for so long. However, the other four council members wanted the opinion of the library board now that it includes two new members.

Eastwood said he "personally leans toward an annex" but agreed that the new library board opinion would be valuable.

Bernard Anderson, former mayor and ex-chairman of the library board, asked that the council support the annex. "You've got a chance to get this damned albatross from around our neck."

Eastwood replied that he would be "proud" to be a member of the council that finally settled the quarter-century old controversy.

Arnold said she prefers an expansion into the garden area to match the east wing. She said when the new wing idea was first proposed in 1961 the space issue was not as critical. "At that time we could afford the sentimentality to leave the building untouched."

The council then voted to refer the issue to the library board for discussion at its July 31 session. Wright voted no because he believed the council should have taken a stand that night.

Conditions to be set July 22

Big Sur Marathon gets OK from supervisors

By MAC McDONALD

IN A decision that neither side exactly welcomed with open arms the Monterey County Board of Supervisors gave "conceptual approval" to the Big Sur International Marathon and set a date in which a public hearing on possible permit conditions for the race will be debated.

The hearing date was set for 3 p.m. Tuesday, July 22 at supervisors chambers in Salinas, a decision — after two and a half hours of public hearing — that was met with some chagrin on both sides of the issue.

"I'm very upset with the decision," said Kirk Gafill, general manager of Nepenthe restaurant in Big Sur and a spokesman for Big Sur residents. Gafill contended that his group did not get adequate notice that the supervisors were to discuss the marathon on Tuesday.

Gafill was also upset because he feels supervisors did not take into consideration a petition signed by 139 residents opposing the marathon. "That's a significant number of signers on a petition that was done in 36 hours;" he said.

As for the Big Sur Marathon race committee, representatives were pleased with the approval in concept, but were disappointed in the three-week delay.

"We wanted a complete decision tonight," said Ron Parravano, a member of the race committee. "All we really wanted was conceptual approval, we don't oppose conditions. My concern is with the delay. That's three more weeks, and that's time."

Parravano said the race committee is already five months behind on planning for the 1987 race — if there ever is one. The first race, held in late April, was planned a year and a half in advance, he added.

"We can't start knocking on doors (for sponsors) without a permit," Parravano said. "But we're real optimistic now. We're not afraid of conditions. We expected conditions."

Getting major sponsorship is one of the objectives of the race committee now, he told supervisors.

"Without major sponsorship we can't envision or realize the larger amounts of revenue" needed to sustain the race and produce funds for charities, he said. Limiting the number of runners — a possible condition — "would limit our ability to get major sponsorship," he added.

There was some question on both sides of the supervisors' table whether the issue should be before the board of supervisors at all. But Chairman Sam Karas said he was asked in a letter from Caltrans district director in San Luis Obispo, Thomas Pollock, for a "draft resolution" on the marathon. "We will then act on your draft and send comments to be considered for the final resolution," the letter said. Caltrans is the agency that would issue a permit for the race.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, in whose district the race was run, at first balked at giving any kind of approval to the race, conceptual or otherwise. She said there were "serious safety issues" and "legitimate, serious complaints" to be addressed before any kind of approval could be given.

"I believe a consensus can be reached on this issue," she said, "but we need specifics in writing so there are some guarantees."

Strasser Kauffman added that she didn't object to approving the marathon if "proper safety, health and traffic issues are met," something she believes is up to the race committee — working with the Big Sur community — to solve.

"I still believe that (full community support) can be achieved."

Parravano said that Big Sur input and representation on the race community was solicited, but they "chose not to be involved."

"We can't hog-tie them and drag them into our meetings," Parravano said about Big Sur residents' reluctance.

Supervisor Shipnuck, who said the supervisors should take "a leadership role" in promoting this "community event," made a motion to support the race. Supervisor Marc Del Piero added that he supported the race, but made a few suggestions to race committee members, especially the need to enlist local community support. Without support from Big Sur, it would "ring the death knell for the Big Sur Marathon," he said.

As for Gafill, he said the best solution would be for the race committee to come up with a "very specific written proposal" so community concerns can be addressed. He added that all the negative impacts of the race were "solely on Big Sur."

Bob Bussinger, general manager of Ventana Inn and president of the Big Sur Chamber of Commerce, said his organization was 94 percent opposed to the race, primarily because of loss of business revenue, sanitation problems and the fact that very few Big Sur charities benefitted from the race. The chamber has 24 members.

He added that he wouldn't object to the race if certain concessions were made, including addressing the sanitation problem, charities, time of year and day of week the race is run, limiting number of runners and taking care of the sign problem. Signs indicating the race was to be run and that travel to Big Sur would be delayed were set up on Saturday and taken down Monday, a full day after the race was run, he said.

Parravano addressed several areas of concern: closure of Highway 1 for six hours on race day, limiting the number of runners, changing the direction of the course (starting at the mouth of the Valley going to Big Sur), distribution of proceeds to charities, and health and safety questions.

He said the committee is willing to work out compromises on virtually all areas of concern except perhaps limiting the number of runners, which could reduce the ability to obtain major sponsorship. Parravano said the committee has set an upper limit of 3,000 runners.

Supervisors considered two motions, one approving the marathon in concept (with a letter stating so to be sent to Caltrans) by a 4-1 vote (Supervisor Dusan Petrovic dissenting) and the second a unanimous vote setting a public hearing on conditions for the permit. Petrovic said he wanted the wording in the motion to say supervisors "don't oppose" the marathon rather than approving it, something Shipnuck labelled "wishy-washy."

Municipal Court Judge William Burleigh asked supervisors before the vote whether they would consider the conditions in one week instead of three. "Caltrans won't move until you do," he said. Karas replied that July 22 was the earliest the supervisors could consider the issue.

All fireworks banned on Carmel Beach on July 4

THE FOURTH of July is fast approaching and once again the city of Carmel is girding itself for another all-out assault by revelers.

To prevent damage to private and public property, to prevent injuries to celebrants and to avoid the melee that occurred a few years ago, absolutely no fireworks of any kind, including the so-called "safe and sane" variety, will be allowed on Carmel Beach or within the city limits according to the Carmel Police Department.

In addition no alcoholic beverages will be allowed on the beach after 10 p.m.

Fires on the beach will only be allowed in areas west of a line reached by the high tide. No fires will be allowed within 25 feet of any wall, vegetation or combustible materials. Materials being burned may not extend more than two feet above the base of the fire. Flames of the fire shall extend no more than five feet from the base.

No fires will be allowed on the beach after 10 p.m.

As for parking, several changes will be made to normal parking and traffic patterns:

- There will be no parking or vehicular traffic on Scenic Drive.
- There will be no parking on San Antonio Street on either side, from Fourth Avenue to Santa Lucia Street.
- On Eighth Street there will be no parking west of San Antonio.
- On 13th Street there will be no parking west of San Antonio.
- All vehicular traffic on Scenic Drive beginning at its southermost point to the intersection with Santa Lucia will be one-way northbound between 8 a.m. and 12 midnight July 4.
- All vehicular traffic on Santa Lucia beginning at its westernmost point and extending east to its intersection with Carmelo Street, will be one-way eastbound between 8 a.m. and 12 midnight July 4. Santa Lucia will remain two-way east of its intersection with Carmelo. Traffic westbound on Santa Lucia will be diverted north or south on Carmelo.

For more information contact the Carmel Police Department.

BEHIND THE LINES

BY MICHAEL GARDNER

Damn the torpedos...

LET'S SAY a property owner wants to build a house and all the paperwork is in order.

All that is left is the stamp of approval from the planning commission, which doesn't meet for a month. Said property owner decides to "go for it" — to use Clint's words — to beat the rainy season.

How fast would the city come around with its red tags if the foundation was poured before the permit was officially granted? Some things are better left unsaid.

Now, let's take the interesting cases of two of the latest projects boasted by the city — public restrooms at Devendorf Park and the beach access stairways.

The restrooms near completion and two of the four access stairways are now in use. Both projects meet all the technical guidelines and definitely benefit the city and its visitors.

However, the monkey wrench is that the city does not have Coastal Commission approval for the projects. Waivers have been sought by the city and recommended by commission staff. Approval of the waivers, however, is not expected until the July 8-11 Coastal Commission session.

Quick call to Les Strnad at the Coastal Commission office in Santa Cruz confirmed all of this.

And pointedly asked if the city technically is in violation of the Coastal Act for building before waivers are issued, Strnad replied, "You might want to say that."

Strnad has no plans for a stop work order. "It would serve no purpose other than process and procedure at this point."

The property owner had his deadline — beat the rainy season. The city has its own time constraints — bathrooms for at least the August tourist crunch and access stairways in time for the Fourth of July.

The point is that the city seems to be implying a "do as I say and not as I do" philosophy when it comes to due process.

Now can we expect the city to be more sympathetic to private individuals and businesses stuck in similar situations?

And perhaps it's time to lobby for Paul Laub's idea of a pre-approved book so projects simply awaiting the technicality of official okay can sidestep the time-consuming planning commission process.

CLINT TALES

Tourists waiting for lunch outside the Hog's Breath clamored around a white stretch limousine. "Is it Clint's?" they asked one another. A man peered into the car and proudly announced, "There's a copy of CHP magazine in the front seat. It must be Clint's."

For all three of you tourists who braved this column this far: no, the white limo does not belong to Clint. And I'm not going to tell you what he drives either.

Another Clint phone call to the office. Some lady from Philadelphia wants to know whether Stan Laurel of Laurel and Hardy fame is Clint's dad. She was serious. I thought these kinds of questions only came from Des Moines.

Idol Herb Caen recently wrote something to the effect that the best lookin' mayors around are Diane Feinstein of S.F. and Ed Koch of N.Y.C. I'm sure there's bound to be mail from Carmel ladies wondering why our mayor didn't make Herb's day, whoops, list.

Clint had more than script reading chores at Camp Pendleton where he's filming Heartbreak Ridge. Seems he ordered up a copy of the agenda packet so he could do some homework before the council meeting.

Federal Express came to the rescue. Sounds like a good TV commercial idea. I get the commission, though.

Dirty Harry is pinched! On his noon tour, Clint apparently had problems with finding a parking space Tuesday afternoon. So, like a tourist, he wheeled into the yellow zone in front of a local liquor store on Dolores Street, across from Piccadilly.

Thirty seconds after Clint and his passenger, Councilwoman Helen Arnold, left the car a Carmel meter maid slapped it with a $10 ticket.

But the meter maid's not to blame. Clint was driving a tiny incognito economy car — a common practice of his.

A FUTILE GESTURE?

Our little item about moving council meetings provoked concern from Sandy Farrell, secretary extraordinaire at city hall, who has the unenviable task of managing the throngs.

Seems that when I wrote about the size of Carpenter Hall no one qualified the numbers so I assumed (remember the saying about "assume") it would accommodate about a hundred more than the council chambers.

Wrong, wrong, wrong, was Sandy's response. I won't quote what she really said. So in checking it seems that the council dais and two pianos take a large chunk of room, reducing Carpenter Hall's seating capacity to 85 or 90. These new figures indicate Carpenter Hall has room for about 35 more people, max.

Compare that to the 200 residents — yes, Sandy confirms, 200 Carmelites — who had to wait in line last time around for the meeting. Maybe it's not worth relocating?

A note: a report indicates that pew or bench seating at city hall would provide for about 18 more people at a cost of $7,300.

As one insider noted about the fuss: "Hell, Clint's only got 20 more meetings so what's the big deal?"

QUICK QUIPS

Steve Taylor, the force behind a successful part-time city recreation program, has told the city that he cannot accept the position of full-time director, because of school (he's a teacher) and family commitments.

There's a "de facto freeze" on the position of design planner once held by Nan Roth, who recently resigned, according to City Administrator Doug Schmitz.

Doug wants to see what kind of staff work is prompted by the move to rewrite the general plan and its enabling ordinances before making any suggestions on filling the position in the planning department.

Carole Colter, former supervisor of the Carmel Youth Center, has passed her real estate licensing test and will join ERA and Cox Real Estate of Marina in mid-July.

The plan for a multi-agency advisory council for Big Sur will be discussed by the board of supervisors next week. Ammunition for the anti-federalization forces.

The library reports the following: Someone came in looking for information on the types of city government, how they operate, etc. Trying to be helpful, one of our favorite librarians referred the patron to city hall for more information. "But there's no government down there," was his sarcastic reply.

I'LL REMEMBER

I'm not much on sentimentality, but there's something about the Fourth of July that gets to me. What will I think about this holiday other than bikinis on the beach?

I'll remember June of 1979 as I walked through Haus Am Checkpoint Charlie — a memorial museum to those who braved the Berlin Wall for freedom or death. I'll remember walking into East Berlin under the shadow of machine guns.

I'll remember the fall of 1981 and China — a place where every few miles there was a checkpoint to restrict travel among the populace. You couldn't just hop the train from Beijing to Xian — you had to have the government's permission first.

I'll remember the spring of 1986 television news photos of South African blacks seeking rights in the land of apartheid. I can only remember the scenes since the government now bans all coverage of the protest movement.

I'll remember last week and the failed ouster of California Assemblyman Tom Hayden. I'll think about what would happen if it had succeeded.

So, this Fourth of July, I'll remember to say thanks that we live in the United States.

I hope you will too.

Refreshments will be served at the meeting.

The regular CVPOA board meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. the following day, Wednesday, July 9 at St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church in Carmel Valley.

City council approves a $5.9 million city budget

CARMEL WILL not go to the dogs, just yet.

The Carmel City Council — minus Mayor Clint Eastwood — approved a biennial municipal budget Monday afternoon that did not include a police department proposal for a canine patrol.

Police had wanted to use the dog to help patrol Carmel Beach. However, enforcement problems have been substantially reduced since the council banned night fires and alcohol from the beach, City Administrator Doug Schmitz reported.

Schmitz withdrew the canine corps proposal, but added the plan may be resubmitted during the mid-year budget review if there is an increase in problems at the beach.

The municipal budget unanimously approved by the council calls for $5.9 million in expenditures in 1986-87 and another $6.6 million in 1987-88.

City grants once again were an issue before the biennial budget was approved.

Councilwoman Elinor Laiolo for the second time in as many budget meetings attempted to cut the $4,375 grant to Planned Parenthood. She questions why Carmel grants so much compared to other cities and she is uncertain that it serves enough residents to justify the amount.

Laiolo proposed to reduce the grant to $1,000, but the motion failed.

However, Laiolo's request to increase the grant to We Care by $1,000 was unanimously accepted. We Care, an organization dedicated to fighting drug and alcohol abuse among peninsula youth, now will receive $1,725 from the city. The extra $1,000 will be re-allocated out of the building and maintenance fund.

Councilwoman Helen Arnold also succeeded in changing the grants. She successfully lobbied for an additional $450 allocation to the Carl Cherry Foundation bringing its total grant to $750.

The Community and Cultural Commission recommends the grants to the city council. The council has under study revisions to the city's grants policy.

Key provisions in the budget are:

- A $7,500 grant to the Carmel Business Association.
- A 2 percent employee pay hike for 1986-87. Salaries for 1987-88 will have to be negotiated because the contract will expire next fiscal year.
- The police department budget is about $1.33 million.
- The full-time recreation director is the only new staff position. City employees will now total 94.
- The 10 percent room tax will generate about $2.43 million and the sales tax will add another $1.29 million.

Odello East zoning before Coastal Commission

THE PROPOSED zoning for the Odello East property will be discussed by the California Coastal Commission Tuesday, July 8 in Marina Del Rey.

Commissioners are expected to adopt revised findings supporting their permissive zoning for the Odello East development.

The revisions are in response to Monterey County Superior Court Judge John Phillips' ruling in October 1985 that the original Coastal Commission findings for the Odello zoning were in conflict with the Coastal Act and the California Environmental Quality Act.

The decision was in response to a suit filed by the city of Carmel April 14, 1983. Following the election of Mayor Clint Eastwood and Councilmembers Elinor Laiolo and Bob Fischer, the city announced it will not pursue further legal action on the Odello issue.

The Odello family has proposed to develop a 162-residential subdivision, farmer's market and restaurant on their 134 acres on the east side of Highway 1 about one-half mile south of Rio Road.

However, the zoning may turn out to be moot if the Odello property remains within the planning boundaries of the Carmel Valley Master Plan, which will severely restrict development.

Two-story building, underground garage

Planners to consider expansion of church

By NANCY HILES

THE CARMEL Planning Commission on July 9 is scheduled to consider an application by the Carmel Presbyterian Church to construct a two-story building on its parking lot site, a request to refund in-lieu parking fees required for a remodel of the former Sprouse-Reitz Variety Store location and conduct a design review of the Grunion Run development.

The commission will meet 4 p.m. Wednesday, July 9 in the Carmel City Council Chambers.

A continued application by the Presbyterian Church will have a second hearing during the meeting.

Church officials for the church located on the southeast corner of Junipero and Mountain View avenues have proposed to build a 3,480 sq. ft. first floor for classroom and office space and a 2,580 sq. ft. second story of classrooms in the present location of its parking lot. To replace the lot, the church has proposed to build an underground parking lot beneath the structure. It has also requested an expansion of its sanctuary.

The church is located in the R-1 or residential district, and the planned building, according to a staff report, does not meet with the mass and height requirements in that zone. The R-1 height restrictions are for 24 ft. and the church building reaches 28 ft. Lot coverage would reach 47.2 percent and the zone allows only 45 percent coverage.

There is also an ordinance that could prohibit the construction of any new churches and accessory buildings in the R-1 district.

During the planning commission meeting June 25, church representative Will Shaw told the commissioners the church wished to consolidate its functions and activities on the properties. Many activities, Shaw said, had to be conducted in buildings around the city because of the lack of room at the church.

The commission will review whether or not the project is consistent with the adopted plans and ordinances, determine appropriate design standards and decide if an environmental impact report will be required.

The commission will also consider:

• A request by architect George Brook-Kothlow and businessman Roxy Rapp to suspend a use permit condition granted for the Wermuth Building remodel that requires them to pay $126,000 in in-lieu parking fees.

The remodeling of the former location of Sprouse-Reitz Variety Store on Ocean Avenue was the first test of the master use permit ordinance passed last year. The ordinance requires that any remodel which changes the number of commercial spaces or increases commercial square footage brings the entire building under a review of business uses and an update of its conformity to current parking regulations.

Brook-Kothlow and Rapp as the Mediterranean Partnership acquired a master lease on the 6,000 sq. ft. space formerly occupied by Sprouse-Reitz. They divided the single space into two retail stores, thus triggering the master use permit process which requires one parking space or in-lieu fees for every 1,000 sq. ft. of commercial space. The use permit granted by the city council (in an appeal) required payment of in-lieu fees for six parking spaces at $20,865 per space.

The Mediterranean Partnership has requested that the fees be dropped as no other building has been required to pay the same type of fee and that the businesses which sublet the spaces, Books, Inc. and The Nature Company, are primarily resident-serving and conform to the policies of the general plan.

• A design review for the development of the Grunion Run property on Fourth Avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets. Purchased in January 1986 by attorney Robert D'Isidoro, architect Dennis Hodgens has designed a two-story three-building office/apartment complex for the 16,000 sq. ft. site.

The previous planning commission granted the project its concept design review for nine second-story apartments and approximately 10,000 sq. ft. of office space on the first floor. The development includes an underground parking garage.

During the design review, the commission will consider the appearance and landscaping of the building. Currently, the buildings are designed in a Mediterranean style reminiscent of the buildings on the corner of Dolores Street and Seventh Avenue.

• The commission will consider whether the remodel and addition of a second story with four apartments on the Oliver White building on Dolores Street near Eighth Avenue actually constitutes a new building rather than a remodel. If so, the project must meet different standards than applied when its use permit was issued.

Owner Alan Fox and architect Daryl Hawkins were granted approval earlier this year for a remodel of the building and construction began.

City council will discuss CV master plan

Hatton Canyon Freeway, the proposed San Clemente Dam and development of the Odello East property are just three of the numerous issues in the draft Carmel Valley Master Plan that directly affect Carmel residents.

With that in mind, the Carmel City Council will meet in a special session at 1 p.m. Monday, July 7 to discuss its response to the draft master plan and accompanying environmental impact report.

The deadline for comments is July 10.

The city of Carmel through lawsuits twice has blocked implementation of the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

Planners OK use permit for Goold development

By NANCY HILLS

THE CARMEL Planning Commission June 25 granted a master use permit and approved a design review that paved the way for four studio apartments in the Goold Building and reached a compromise on scenic easements located on three lots bordering Mission Trails park.

The commission also approved resolutions of appreciation for Sandy Swain, Gene Cava, Thomas Nash and Marjorie Montelius, the four planning commissioners ousted during the June 3 Carmel City Council meeting. The resolutions individually recognized their service to the city during their terms as commissioners.

Other commission actions included a merger of six 25 by 100 ft. lots on Junipero Avenue into four parcels, granted use permits for a dress shop, fine crafts store and a fabric art shop.

The commission also approved a priority list for ongoing special projects in the city. It also opened a public hearing on an addition to the Carmel Presbyterian Church, though the item was continued to July 9.

The master use permit approved by the commission for the Goold building on the southeast corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue allows the addition of a second story consisting of four studio apartments and raising the Sixth Avenue portion of the first floor to street level. The exterior of the studio apartments would continue the white stucco and tile roof style of the building on the northeast corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street. Both the use permit and the design review were continued from the June 18 meeting.

The project was presented to the commission by the Zigmont (Jody) LeTowt, representing Kenneth Goold, a trustee of the Mary Goold estate which owns the building.

The Goold properties on the corner actually consist of two buildings, according to information from LeTowt. The first, on the corner of Ocean Avenue and San Carlos Street, is currently occupied by Roxy clothing store and the Ocean Avenue portion of the Strawberry Patch. The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook offices are located on the second story. Commissioner Bill Brown, publisher of the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook excused himself from discussion when the agenda item came up.

The proposed changes are for the second building front on the corner of Sixth Avenue. A single-story structure, it is currently occupied by the back portion The Strawberry Patch.

The plans calls for raising the first floor to street level and dividing the now-single retail space into two. The creation of a new retail space triggers the master use permit ordinance.

According to the ordinance, an increase in commercial spaces or commercial square footage requires the entire building to come under a review. The review is particularly for businesses on the site to identify nonconforming uses and conformity to present parking requirements.

If developers cannot provide one parking space on site for every 1,000 sq. ft. of commercial area, parking spaces must either be dedicated off-site or the applicant must pay in-lieu parking fees of approximately $20,865 per space. Residences are exempt from the parking requirement.

Approving the recommendation of the previous land use committee, the commissioners voted to charge the applicant for only one space because the remodeling resulted in a net reduction of commercial area.

The planned remodel of the Goold Building creates two retail spaces totaling approximately 2,200 sq. ft. and reduces the 3,000 sq. ft. of current retail area by 800 sq. ft.

The commission also removed a condition allowing offices in the basement of the building. The raising of the first floor on the corner of San Carlos Street and Sixth Avenue creates a basement beneath the building and Planning Director Diane White told the commission it against the city ordinance to use a basement for anything but storage or parking.

LeTowt told the commission he might come before them for a temporary permit to move the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook into the basement while the offices upstairs are brought up to code.

IN ANOTHER continued item from the previous meeting, the commissioners approved an adjustment of a scenic easement on two private lots bordering Mission Trails Park and left one lot easment as it was. Commissioner Carla Ramsey stated a potential conflict of interest and left the room.

According to the staff report, in 1984 the planning commission appproved the constructon of a private road and resubdivision of a large parcel into three lots next to Mission Trails Park. Because of the proximity of the park, the commission established a scenic easement with a boundary based on the topography of the lots and several conditions on building.

In April 1986, the lot owners, Hugh and Martha Gottfried, appealed some of the easement conditions and requested that the boundaries be changed to a uniform 30 ft.

The Carmel Planning Department proposed a new easement line based on topography and reduced front yard setbacks to increase the buildable area on the lots. The new line fell between the 1984 easement line and the one proposed by the Gottfrieds. The staff also recommended that trees be planted to improve the view.

Both commissioners Olaf Dahlstrand and Ed Hicks stated they were opposed to building on scenic easements and Commissioner Bruce Roberts expressed concern about "relaxing" easement requirements. He added that easements included intrusions of noise as well as visual impacts and that the staff had done an "excellent job" on a compromise position.

The rest of the commission agreed and voted unanimously to accept the staff-proposed boundaries and recommendations.

IN OTHER business, the commission:

• Opened a public hearing on the Carmel Presbyterian Church request for a new building in the location of a parking lot, put a parking garage underneath and expand the sanctuary. The church is located on the southeast corner of Junipero and Mountain View avenues near Ocean Avenue. The item was continued until July 9 meeting to give the church time to submit more plans.

Church representative Will Shaw told the commissioners that it would not mean an increase in the congregation at the church but functions, such as the youth program, could held at the church rather than in facilities around town.

Dahlstand expressed concern for a large oak that would be destroyed by construction and asked that the architect investigate ways to save the tree. The commissioners also discussed the increase in traffic and night activity at the church.

• Allowed a merger into four rather than three lots of six 25 ft. frontage parcels on Junipero Avenue near Ninth Avenue. The parcels are owned by Joyce Shockley and Shirley Young.

Both Dahlstrand and Ramsey stated they had conflicts of interest and left the meeting prior to the item being heard.

• Granted a use permit for Palumbo's, a home furnishing and fine crafts store on the corner of Dolores Street and Sixth Avenue. Gail Palumbo was the applicant.

• Granted a use permit for a fabric art shop called Shelley & Mom in the Court of the Fountains. The owner, Shelley Aliotti, showed the commissioners samples of quilted wall hangings she said she makes herself.

Supervisors limit Mahroom to 18 units

AFTER MANY delays residents of Carmel's High Meadow area won a victory when Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed to limit the number of units of the Mahroom development to a maximum of 18.

Supervisors approved the granting of a density bonus not to exceed the 18 units, the maximum density allowed by the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan, by a 3-2 vote, Supervisors Barbara Shipnuck and Dusan Petrovic dissenting. Petrovic called all the delays, confusion and maneuvering involved with the issue "the poorest handled case I've seen in 11 and a half years on the board."

The decision was met by applause from the more than 40 people in attendance, most of them residents of the High Meadow area. One woman, however, was heard to utter to those applauding: "It doesn't matter what you do, we go to court."

The developer, Majid Mahroom, had initially asked for 36 units on the 2.07-acre site, but the county planning department recommended reducing the density to 18 units total (or nine units per acre). Planning staff also recommended density credit for the developer, but not to exceed the 18 units.

By law when a developer agrees to set aside at least 25 percent of the units in a housing development for low- or moderate-income households, the developer in entitled to a density bonus, or "other incentives of equivalent financial value."

Supervisors authorized Chairman Sam Karas to notify Mahroom the manner in which the county would comply with the density bonus provisions, but how that would be done was not spelled out.

"They can have their 25 percent as long as it's not over 18 units," said Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman.

Nature's company

THERE APPEARS to be a lot of people waiting to hear this news.

The Nature Company should be open by the time this paper is on the streets and the Berkeley-based natural history and science store appears to have many eager fans in this area.

The store has taken over half the space that once contained Sprouse Reitz Variety Store, and it's quite a change. It's simply amazing what those tiny touches and little additions such as a fountain, carpet, paint, a completely new exterior, stonework, mirrors, merchandise and thousands of dollars can do. Poor Sprouse Reitz, it's literally just a memory now.

In its place will be 4,000 titles of books on nature, natural history and natural science from gardening to field guides to commentary on nature to children's books to celestial guides. There will be a special section of materials concerning the peninsula and Big Sur area.

There's plenty of other goodies besides the books. Minerals, natural paperweights, telescopes, opticals, fabric moose and elephant potholders, nature audio and video tapes, maps, posters and graphics, fossils, inflatable dinosaurs, bird calls, and oh dear, oh my, T-shirts. There are just too many things to describe here.

The store is aimed toward assisting people to enjoy and learn about the Earth and her inhabitants with a minimum of destruction, according to company president Tom Wruble.

So don't look for real animals, either dead or alive. It's The Nature Company's policy not to take anything from it's natural surroundings that was or is living, and instead provide what Wruble referred to as "alternatives," such as replicas of past and present animals.

I don't think there is a bigger fan than store manager Nancy Hodge, who campaigned to get a branch store in Carmel. Hodge first became acquainted with The Nature Company right after she graduated from University of California, Berkeley.

That was way back before my generation stopped being "A" students — agitation, advocacy and ardor — to become "B" students — boardrooms, brie and BMWs.

JIMMY AND KENNY

Restaurateurs Kenny and Tina Fukumoto, owners of Robata's in The Barnyard and former owners of Shabu Shabu in Carmel Plaza, are launching a new enterprise sometime this week. According to Kenny Fukumoto no particular date was set for when the "All-American" fare restaurant, called Jimmy's American Place, is to "quietly" open. Quietly might be a matter of degree here and we'll see how that goes.

The new restaurant has taken the vacant spot where Rory's, and before that, the Spice Rack restaurants were located in the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center.

The Fukumotos are probably best known in this area for their Japanese restaurants. In fact, it was Robata's that got them into doing this new store.

Fukumoto said he was going to move Robata's out of the Barnyard so he signed a lease for the vacant restaurant just down the way. In the meantime, he worked out a lease with

The Barnyard and stayed there. But he still had to pay rent on the new space, so now we have Jimmy's American Place.

The name is a little bit of an inside joke because, quite frankly, it's named after two gentleman who don't even speak English. Jimmy was the name Fukumoto's father took when he came to the United States from Japan. When Fukumoto's uncle followed, he took the name, too, because it had worked out well for his brother. Then he named a son Jimmy and so on. Whether the name Jimmy is a family tradition or a matter of confusion remains unanswered.

The new eatery is all done up in a contemporary 1940s style, Fukumoto said, and the food includes all kinds of basic American fare. Steaks, fresh seafood, oysters from an oyster bar, pork chops, chicken and, of course, the All-American hamburger. "The core" of the menu harkens back to solid American diner-type food, Fukumoto said.

All kinds of potatoes, from mashed to baked to au gratin and with gravy of course, plenty of appetizers, salads including Caesar Salad and Shrimp Louie. There is, however, no salad bar, but you can get anything by itself because it's all a la carte.

Don't arrive in your shorts and bare feet, though. This is a classy diner — even has fine California wines to complement the meal.

FORWARDED

Megan Terry knew it was time to move her Carmel Stamp and Coin shop when she found she had to mail things to her local customers. They wouldn't come into downtown Carmel. So it was off to Heather Glen Court on Mission Street near the corner of Eighth Avenue.

The stamp and coin collectors shop has been on Dolores Street for more than 40 years, Terry's parents having founded the place, but times certainly have changed since then. Many of her local customers wouldn't try to come so close to the downtown area.

"It doesn't matter where we are. Walk-in trade isn't that important to us. People we do business with have the bug and will find us wherever we are," she said.

GLOBAL BUSINESS

Arlene and Harvey Desind do more than sightsee when they travel internationally. They also find merchandise to bring home and put in their store, International Showcase.

The Desind's recently open their import store in The Crossroads, a second store to the one they have in Los Gatos. Arlene Desind said they have previously owned stores in San Jose and Santa Cruz.

Desind explained that they look for crafts and art indicative of the area they are visiting and often deal directly with the artist. Many items are one-of-a-kind or limited edition.

The merchandise in the store can change depending on what they come across in their wanderings. Right now, they've got articles from Africa, Russia, all the South American countries, Mexico, Spain, Italy, Portugal, Sri Lanka and Korea.

PROM NIGHT

Dee Borsella of Borsella on Lincoln Street near Ocean Avenue wants to remind people that her Prom II, a repeat of last year's Prom I, is coming up on July 12. It's bigger and better this year, she said. Those who know what this is about can contact her at 625-6640. Cryptic, I know, but necessarily so.

NEW ADVERTISING

Even General George Washington couldn't keep David McIntyre from the charms of the California coastline.

McIntyre purchased 12-year-old Associated Advertising at 26358 Carmel Rancho Lane from owner James Keen in May, and left Valley Forge, Pa. where his office view included Washington's headquarters. Washington probably would have done the same if California had been one of the original colonies.

McIntyre said he took a chance and sold his Valley Forge agency with a historic view after a visit to California. His new enterprise is a full-service agency, McIntyre explained, and does anything the client needs, including advertising in print, radio and television, and market research and planning. He said his new firm currently has two principal clients, Salinas Valley Ford/Isuzu and Monterey Federal Credit Union.

One of his first actions after taking charge was to promote Media Director Tracy Yip to business manager, though she will continue her previous responsibilities.

STRAUSS SMALL BUSINESS CONSULTING

Lance J. Strauss, Inc., a small business consulting firm which has operated for three years on the peninsula, has moved its offices from Garden Road to 560 Carmel Rancho Blvd.

According to information supplied by Strauss, Inc., the company specializes "in venture capital formation and business development, and has helped a wide range of local clients in many diverse business fields, including traditional companies as well as local artists, craftsmen and musicians."

Company President Lance Strauss says the focus of his consulting practice is to keep his fees as affordable as possible. This is accomplished by his providing his consulting advice in an instructional form. For expample, instead of spending 10 hours on a client project, he spends four hours and provides hisclients with a customized guidance and instruction package detailing how they can accomplish the project themselves.

The company also has a venture capital "hotline" with the "country's only publicly available computer database for venture capital sources. People who call the hotline's toll-free number can obtain detailed information within minutes about venture capital firms whose investment parameters match those of their enterprises."

PAUSING DURING the hustle and bustle of getting the store ready to open July 2 are the Nature Company crew. In the back is Jeff Thomas, manager of San Francisco's Ghirardelli Square store: in the next row from left to right stand salespersons Beverly Fries and Kathy Crowe, Vice President and Director of Retail Doug Doll, Carmel store manager Nancy Hodge and salespersons Tim Crisler and Melanie DeDomenico; seated are left to right, Gary Taylor, manager of the Fourth Street Berkeley store and salespersons David Park and Julie Seldy. PEBBLE BEACH CO. AND LODGE GET NEW PEOPLE

A new general manager of The Lodge at Pebble Beach, Paul Ratchford, has been named to replace Patrice LaRoque, who left the position he held for five years in April.

Bill Hall, vice president of resort operations for Pebble Beach Co., officially announced the appointment this week.

Ratchford, according to Pebble Beach Co. information, is a native of Savannah, Ga. and was most recently pre-opening rooms/operations specialist for Ritz Carlton Hotels. He spent five years with Hyatt Hotels in Washington, D.C., Atlanta, and Winston/Salem after graduation from the University of Georgia in 1977.

Ratchford, the press release states, now has overall responsibility for the world-famous 161-room golf and tennis resort on 17-Mile Drive in Pebble Beach.

Ratchford, his wife Jeanne, and their son, Robert, reside in Pebble Beach.

The Pebble Beach Co. has also announced that James Warren has joined the company as director of sales and marketing and Karen A. Hunter has been named director of public relations.

In his new position, Warren will oversee group sales, convention services, advertising and marketing for The Lodge at Pebble Beach and The Inn at Spanish Bay, a 270-room golf resort scheduled to open in fall 1987

Warren, the release states, has for the past three years worked in real estate sales and marketing for the Dunes Marketing Group in Hilton Head, S.C. Before that, he spent five years with the Hyatt in Hilton Head as director of sales.

He plans to reside with his wife, Peggy, and their daughter, Lindsay, in Carmel Valley.

Hunter, in her new position, will oversee media relations, publications and promotions for The Lodge, the private Beach and Tennis Club and the opening of The Inn at Spanish Bay. Hunter was with the Los Angeles Sheraton prior to coming to the peninsula.

Additionally, Sandra Dasky has been named director of conference services for the Lodge at Pebble Beach. Prior to her appointment at the Lodge, Kasky was with the Monterey Sheraton as conference service manager and assistant director of food and beverage.

CARMEL VOICE

BY SAM SALERNO

Getting into the spirit

There are two places which have gotten into the spirit of July 4th and the Statue of Liberty celebration.

Bud's Pub is bedecked in paper statues which appear on the windows, along with red, white, and blue banners. The other place is Lugo's Shell Station on San Carlos which is in a contest run by Coca Cola, in conjunction with all Shell stations around California. The purpose is to see which station is decorated the best . . . Lugo's should be a winner. I don't know what the winning prize is going to be, but the station looks truly All-American!

WHAT PRICE GLORY?

It was no Iwo Jima, but he paid his price. No sooner had we mentioned that John Beech returned from a show in San Francisco do we learn that he was injured in a fall from his ladder as he was attempting to put up the American flag as he does each day preparatory to opening up his gallery. John suffered a broken wrist and one broken rib in the fall. He'll be side-lined for awhile. Get well, John.

HERE AND THERE

Ran into Janet Coles just before she flew back to Indiana to play in the Indiana Mayflower Classic and we had a nice chat. She was suffering from a cold and decided to take a week off. It paid off, cause she earned a check for $2,895 and shot a score of 290, 2 over par for the Indianapolis Country Club course. Our conversation centered around Bobby Clampett and she mentioned she had played with him and his attitude is good and he feels he'll get it together soon. She did say that he loves spending more time at home what with Mrs. Clampett expecting their first child soon.

While on the subject of golf, it was nice to see a local (Salinas) boy win the California Amateur championship at Pebble Beach. Terry Miskell, a 19 year old sophomore at USC won 5 and 4 over Mike Blewett of Burlingame who also attends USC. Terry was tutored by John Geertsen Sr. of MPCC, who is one of the instructors in the golf clinic at Pebble Beach where this reporter handles the video camera. I think Terry's toughest test during the amateur came from another local, Caley Boyns, whom Terry barely defeated on the 18th hole, 1 up. Both had won their morning rounds, 6 and 5 for Terry and 2 and 1 for Casey. Perhaps Terry will follow in the footsteps of Mike Brannan of Salinas, and Clampett of Carmel Valley, two former amateur winners.

This week marks the return of Loran Speck Gallery. After wondrously successfully month-long show in San Francisco at Conacher's Galleries, Loran will once again be able to fill his gallery with the incredibly realistic still-life paintings for which he is so well known. Many of Carmel's finest attended the opening night of the exhibition in San Francisco including artists George Bleich, Gael Baldock, Stanley Brice, and Steven Huber. Linda Collins accompanied the artist and hosted the private reception held at the St. Francis, following the opening night preview. Others who attended included Andrew Poulsen of the Royal Danish Cafe, Mr. & Mrs. LaCroix, Mr. & Mrs. Lind, Alan and Karen Burg, Roslind Kidder, The Neill Haskells of San Francisco, and David Austin of Los Angeles and Carmel. Charles Crank of Em Le's arrived in a chauffered limousine.

OUTSIDE TALEN

Understand that Mike Rosetto of Golf Arts and Imports imported some Chicago talent (camera work and graphics) to put together a catalogue on his shop which will be sent to golf art enthusiasts around the nation. What I like about Mike is that he's always thinking and never leaves a stone unturned. We'll keep you posted on when the brochure is complete. Rest assured, it'll be top quality!

GUESS WHO I SAW?

Jessie Soliman, who was employed at the Casa Munras and Rancho Canada back in town dolling out the drinks at the Hog's Breath. Jessie was a regular on the links until he moved north to work in electronics in the San Jose area. He's back now and happy to be here. Stop by the Hog and say "howdy."

Want to get away from the crowds in Carmel? Well, why not head north as the Bowen family did recently for two weeks. To take in Expo '86, Don, his wife Judy, their children, Kim and Scott, and his in laws, Roger and Caroline Earle, rented a van and drove up the coast and caught all the great spots in California, Oregon and Washington, and then headed to Expo '86. The trip was great, according to Don, and he and his family recommend the Expo visit. Try it, you'll like it!

DON'T MISS

Woody Herman and his new herd appearing at the Monterey Sheraton on July 14th. At 72, Woody will be celebrating his 50th Anniversary Tour and he's making Monterey one of his stops. We've followed Woody since the early days when he first recorded Woodchopper's Ball . . . that recording, incidentally, has sold more than five million copies. Make your reservations as soon as possible because the seating will go fast. If you can't attend, listen to Johnny Adams or yours truly on KRML, your jazz station in Carmel.

See you next week!

Children learn about reptiles

The Seaside Branch Library invites children to a program on reptiles at 1 p.m. Wednesday, July 9. Marilyn McMasters will bring some of her reptile friends with her.

The program is for children of kindergarten through fifth grade age. Children under five should bring an adult. The library is at 550 Harcourt Ave. in Seaside. For details, call 899-2055.

CARMEL RIVER WATER NEWS

BY HENRIETTA STERN

Willows — a crop for the future

SPRING PLANTING is over and residents throughout the Carmel Valley are nurturing their crops in anticipation of summer's harvest.

Some have visions of baskets brimming with fresh vegetables or homes filled with colorful flowers; others have intentions best left unmentioned. For the staff of the water management district, however, spring planting this year means one thing — willows.

Not for food, nor decoration, nor cash, but for an enduring harvest of a less tangible nature — restoring the stability and riparian habitat of the Carmel River.

Experts agree that the Carmel River is "out of balance." Moderate storms presently result in much more serious erosion than should occur, and riverfront property is damaged or destroyed in the process.

In determining why these river bank failures happen, investigators discovered that the most significant change to the river channel since the mid-1960s was the disappearance of the streamside (riparian) vegetation, primarily willows and cottonwoods. Thus a major focus of the Carmel River management program is to re-establish a healthy riparian corridor to help coax the river back to its stable configuration of 20 years past.

The most economical way to achieve this goal is planting willows — thousands of willows! The district, with the help of local agencies and volunteers, has planted the equivalent of nearly five miles of willow cuttings since 1984. Plantings have occured primarily in the Boronda, Garland Ranch and Schulte areas, as the patchy vegetation there results in high erosion potential.

CULTIVATING WILLOWS is not too different from growing other crops.

Typically, a backhoe digs a three-to-four-foot deep trench, where live, four-foot cuttings are arranged in line. The trench is then backfilled to securely hold the bare stems in place. Most planting is done in fall, as the willows are dormant then, as well as to take advantage of the winter rains. Because winter 1986 was wet, significant spring planting occured this year.

Once established, willows in most areas won't need irrigation, but young plants or those in drier areas are more vulnerable to dessication. Thus the regional park district and the water management district have installed drip irrigation systems for plants in the Garland Ranch and Schulte areas.

Take a walk along the river and note the impact of established willow stands. You'll probably notice a wider and more stable river adjacent to these trees.

According to Jim Finnigan, district engineer, the presence of willows reduces the velocity of water flowing by, thereby catching sediment and inhibiting bank erosion. The root mass also acts as a stabilizing mesh to keep the soil in place. Jim is pleased that cuttings planted last fall have already played a significant role in stabilizing river banks near East Garzas Road.

"It's very gratifying to see a textbook-perfect example actually working in real life. And it's happening even faster than I expected, despite the fact that some of the willows appear to be dead. The bare sticks alone seem to do the job pretty well, and some are even sprouting after four months of living under water," he said.

The willows' success depends a lot on location, river conditions and weather. Jim estimates the total survival rate at 60 percent, which is not bad considering several hundred plants were lost in a washout this winter. Most of the cuttings planted last fall are about three feet high with good foliage, and some of those planted in 1984 now reach six feet.

For a closer look at the willows planted to date, check the river banks upstream from the Boronda Bridge, the Trail and Saddle Club or the Little League fields at Paso Hondo.

Note how they align with the river, or in some cases, extend from the bank toward the river channel at an angle to help train the river towards center.

With continued hard work and a little help from Mother Nature, a protective barrier of willows will eventually flourish from Schulte Road to Carmel Valley Village.

(Editor's note: The Carmel River Water News is a bi-monthly columnn written by the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District staff. Its purpose is to inform Pine Cone readers about district activities relating to the Carmel River and its environs. For more information or suggestions for topics, readers are invited to contact Henrietta Stern at 649-4866, or at PO Box 85, Monterey 93940.)

Carmel doctor wrote song for Liberty

the Statue of Liberty," he says with a sly grin.

He sent the song (through Rep. Leon Panetta) to the Statue of Liberty committee, which sent him a letter and a Liberty pin in thanks. He also has letters of thanks from the offices of the president of France, President Reagan, New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, Gov. George Deukmejian and the Department of the Interior. He'll also sing the song to you at the drop of a hat.

DaVigo, a retired chiropractor, is also an accomplished violinist (he studied with Yehudi Menuhin's teacher) and pianist and sings with a Carmel Foundation chorus. His wife Frances is also a pianist. "I played the piano, that's how we got together," she says.

DaVigo writes songs for the pure pleasure of it; he hasn't made a cent on any of the songs he's written. "It's a joy for me to do it," he sings out.

How does it feel to be 80 years old, he was asked?

"It's not the age, it's the life you've lived," he says cheerfully. "When you have a precious wife such as Frances, sons, grandchildren, and a lovely home in Carmel, what more could you want? We've truly had a beautiful life."

(Editor's Note: If you'd like a copy of Davigo's song "Miss Liberty," simply give him a call at 624-2414.)

OUR FREEDOM IS WORTH CELEBRATIN

"We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness."

from the Declaration of Independence
by Thomas Jefferson, 1776

America celebrates her freedom every Fourth of July with flags and fireworks, parades and speeches. As Americans we celebrate our freedom every day when we exercise our rights and privileges as citizens of the Land of the Free.

Freedom lives as long as we keep it alive. Like any precious resource, it must be used wisely, and always treasured.

The people of County Bank and Trust are proud of our freedom as Americans. We're also proud to be a part of an independent, homeowned bank serving the financial needs of our friends and neighbors here where we live.

We invite you to join with us in celebrating our precious freedom on America's Birthday — the freedom that allows us to give you Number One service all year long.

FIRE LINES
BY MITCH KASTROS

Vacation Safety

This summer many of you will be away on vacation to the mountains, lakes, beaches and cities. In many instances you will place yourself in vulnerable situations as far as fire safety is concerned. Being aware of and prepared for these situations can help make for a more enjoyable trip.

Those of you traveling by recreational vehicle or with a trailer have several things to consider before departing. There is the usual automotive servicing that involves checking the engine, tires, wipers and lights. In addition to this you should install a fire extinguisher and smoke detector in the RV or trailer. If you already have these items in your vehicle, the extinguisher should be serviced and the smoke detector should be tested. Finally, have the wiring, electrical and gas (propane) appliances checked and serviced if necessary.

BOATING BASICS

If you have a boat, the same things apply as far as basic maintenance and safety preparation goes (engine, fire extinguisher service). There are additional things that need to be checked, which require a little more detail or fall under certain codes. These items include life preservers, radios, rigging and the number and sizes of fire extinguishers you should have according to the size of your boat. Call the Coast Guard for more information at 375-2278.

FIRE SAFETY AND CAMPING

Those of you who go camping this summer should be aware of the extreme fire danger that is with us. That danger is very evident at this time with the recent breakout of grass and forest fires in the area.

It would be wise for campers to check with the people at the Division of Forestry before embarking on a trip. They will be able to tell you about the fire danger conditions of the areas you plan to visit, and also assist with any questions you may have.

If you plan on having open campfires, make sure the proper steps are taken to assure safety and avoid disaster.

First of all, the fire should be on bare, solid ground, with at least a 10-foot diameter of bare, solid ground surrounding the fire area. This means clearing all flammable materials within this diameter. Never build a fire on top of spongy ground, because it will ignite underneath the surface and slowly spread to dry vegetation without anyone ever knowing. This type of fire can burn and spread for days until it reaches an area dry enough to ignite surface vegetation. It's like a time bomb and the results can be devastating.

The campfire should never be left unattended, and should be kept fairly small. Flames reaching about three feet in the air are as high as you would want for a safe fire. Make sure there are pails of water or a pressurized water extinguisher nearby to check fires that may start from sparks or to keep the campfire under control in case of a gust of wind. If there is no water available, it is best not to have a campfire.

When extinguishing a campfire, gently spread the embers and then thoroughly douse them with water. Keep doing this until all smoke is gone and you can safely touch the coals with your bare hands. Only then is it safe to leave the campfire.

Finally, never have a flame inside a tent. This includes lanterns, heaters, liquid fuel stoves, candles and matches. Only flashlights and battery-powered lanterns should be permitted in tents, and be sure not to pitch tents near an open fire area.

Whenever using matches, make sure they are cool to the touch and broken in half before discarding. Cigarette and cigar stubs and pipe ashes should be discarded into fireproof containers when finished with.

Keeping in mind the safety steps you should take, being careful and using some common sense should help make for an enjoyable camping experience.

HIGH-RISE HOTEL SAFETY

Those of you whose plans include staying in a high-rise hotel should consider a few fire precautions also. Be aware that the largest fire rescue ladders will only reach about seven stories.

As soon as you check into your room find out where the nearest fire escape is. It could be right outside your window, but if it isn't, find the nearest one and make sure your family knows where it is. Also see if there is a fire hose nearby.

Some of the larger, well-known hotels will provide material in the rooms explaining what to do in case of a fire. There may also be a presentation on the television that gives instruction in dealing with a fire. Take a moment to read and/or view the presentation.

When packing for your trip, throw in a smoke detector and a large roll of duct tape to take with you. When in the hotel, tape the smoke detector to the upper left corner of the door to the hallway when you retire at night. This position on the door will allow the detector to pick up smoke, and also help you remember to take it with you when you leave. The duct tape will come in handy to seal off door cracks and vents and keep smoke from entering your room. A large roll costs about $6 and is well worth it for this purpose.

If you are ever in the situation where the hotel you are staying in is on fire, remember the basic plan you would use at home. Stay low and crawl to the door to feel it. If it is hot, do not open it under any circumstances. If it is cool, slowly open it and assess the situation. If you are sure that you and your family can safely make it to the fire escape and out of the building, go ahead. (Never use the elevator in this situation.)

If there is reasonable doubt that you can make it, stay in your room. Tape all of the vents and the side and top cracks of the door, and place wet towels in the bottom crack of the door. Fill the bath tub with water and use water pitchers and wet towels and blankets to fight fire if you have to. Do not open or break any windows to the outside unless your room fills with smoke to the point where you can't breathe. If you must break a window, do so without throwing furniture or heavy objects through it. There are people (firefighters) down below, and an object falling several stories can severely injure or kill someone.

As hard as it may be, try and stay calm. You will deal with the situation much better, it will help others with you stay calm and you will use up less oxygen, which may be a factor along the way.

Remember, the fire department is on the scene, they know you are there and they will do their best to get you out. If you are prepared for this possible situation, your chances of survival will be very good.

Red Cross through the ages

– THE CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA Chapter of the American Red Cross held a lively installation and awards dinner at the Pine Inn June 24, highlighted by a fashion show and videotape presentation.

The fashion show — featuring Red Cross garb from Clara Barton's day through the modern age modelled by chapter members — was given an informative narration by Jean Snow, who was herself dressed in a modern-day Red Cross uniform. Highlight of the fashion had to be Paul Eastman's fine job in a red-striped 1916-era bathing suit, knobby knees and all. A close second goes to Dorothy von Meier as Clara Barton.

Other models included: Anne Dittmer, Betty Mehlin, Joan Ingalls, Marylou Root, Sue Addleman, and Elinor Laiolo.

The videotape presentation featured tape of Marjorie McKiernon — who was in attendance at the dinner — receiving her Harriman Award -- the Red Cross' highest commendation — at the recent Red Cross national convention.

In other action during the meeting, board members were selected for one-year terms. They included:

Board officers: James Heisinger, Jr., chairman; Bill Hill, first vice chairman; Earl Hudson, second vice chairman; Elinor Laiolo, secretary; and Bruce Dunlap, treasurer.

Board directors: Jib Bowe, Ida Carter, Phyllis Crockett, Tiny DeKay, Paul Eastman, Philip S. Gray, John Jacoby, Constance McEnery, Sidney Morris, Donald Nelson, Lee Patton, Yvonne Reid, Herb Shoemaker, Elizabeth Taylor, Penny Vieregge, and Martha Wright.

Special advisors: David Borucki, Douglas Despard, Anne Dittmer, and Paul Root.

Receiving pins for service to the Red Cross were: 45-year pin, Marylou Root; 35-year pin, James Kelsey; 30-year pin, Paul Artellan and Constance McEnery; 25-year pin, Nancy Foster and Bob Updike; 20-year pin, Lorelei Brock and Vince Rogers; 15-year pin, Vern Allred Jr., Pat Chamberlain, Tim Connell, Mary Martin, and Betty Mehlin; 10-year pin, Dave Cummings, Douglas Despard, Virginia Eichwald, Roger Gardner, Brian Lyke, Beverly Newell, Ron Prieto, Gary Tate, Penny Vieregge, Kenneth Wright, and Martha Wright.

Five-year pin, Marjorie Black, Don Corona, Patrick Dowd, Edyth Heald, Derek Henniford, Nelson Holman, Elinor Laiolo, Sidney Morris, Frank Perkins, Nora Phillips, Ray Sanborn, and Armand Zenopian.

Dorothy von Meier received a certificate for Extraordinary Volunteer Services, and Phil Gray a Citation for Services.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman was the guest speaker for the evening.

VACATION STARTS TODAY

School's closed. Swimmin' will take the place of 'rithmetic and the dolls will do a full day's work for a while. An interesting program on the porch of the Sunset School yesterday afternoon marked the finale of the study hours, and this morning's sun will launch the year's big playtime for the school children of Carmel.

Ten pupils have completed their work at the local school and the names of 77 others appear on the honor roll of promotion.

ORGANIZE TO PROMOTE BACH FESTIVAL HERE

As a concrete indication of community endorsement, and to assist in as many ways as possible in promoting the Bach Festival, a Carmel Bach Festival association was formed Monday evening, the outgrowth of the Monterey Peninsula Orchestra association, with additional members. The idea of the Bach Festival was originated last year by Miss Dene Denny and Miss Hazel Watrous, who have assumed both the financial risk and the hard work connected with the two festivals. It is possible that the advisory board which is at present working with Miss Denny and Miss Watrous in an informal capacity may organize at the end of the summer as the permanent community sponsors of what it is felt will become a valuable annual event.

BIG DOINGS FOR THE FOURTH

The Fourth of July is Tuesday. Each peninsula community will celebrate Independence Day according to their individual characteristics, exemplifying American freedom our forefathers guaranteed on the first Fourth of July when the republic of the United States was established.

Carmel will be quiet with only family fireworks after sundown on the beach, dotted with bonfires on which suppers have been cooked.

Seaside will have its giant patriotic parade and public barbecue. Monterey will entertain naval vessels and personnel and re-enact the landing of Commodore Sloat on Thursday. Pacific Grove will have its usual swim meet at the public pool.

Fourth of July celebrations on the peninsula start at 9:00 o'clock Tuesday morning with the arrival in Monterey Bay of five U. S. naval vessels, the USS de Haven, USS Brenner, USS Everett F. Larson, USS Endurance and USS Conflict.

LIBRARY REMODELING STARTED

Librarian Jo Childers asked that Harrison Memorial Library patrons "bear with" the inconveniences caused by the remodeling of the library. While the work is being done on the reading room, the new references room is serving as a temporary reading room.

The new carpet has been laid and as many of the magazines as possible have been arranged on two long library tables. Another table and some chairs have been placed in the area for the convenience of the reading room patrons.

This phase of the library remodeling should be completed in about a month. All the shelves will be refinished and the walls will be painted. All remodeling work on the library is expected to be completed by Sept. 1

JULY 4TH IN CARMEL: LITTER, LIQUOR, LUNACY

"Litter, liquor and lunacy" is what city officials and workers predict they will face this weekend when an estimated 16,000 merrymakers fill Carmel beaches to celebrate the Fourth of July.

Despite a request by City Administrator Doug Peterson that the City Council curtail some activities due to increased crowds and vandalism, the long-standing tradition of celebrating the fourth on Carmel Beach with fireworks will be allowed.

Preparation for the event and subsequent cleanup cost the city an estimated $3,796 last year. That figure included damage due to vandalism, rental of toilets, equipment, materials and labor by full-time and summer student employees.

"DEAR MRS. CHEST PAINS..."

Dear Dr. Beacham — Recently I thought I was having heart pains so I went to my family doctor for a check up. He ran a multitude of tests and then said I didn't have a heart problem and frankly he did't know what was causing the chest pains.

Can Chiropractic do anything for these pains?

DR. BEACHAM

'Dear Mrs. Chest Pains— You've done the correct thing, always when you suspect a heart condition, have your physician check you. There is an often overlooked condition that Chiropractic helps very easily, it's called the "Slipping Rib Syndrom" (JAMA, Feb. 21 '77, pg. 794). This condition often occurs when one twists while sitting. A very sharp pain will occur which may feel like a knife in your chest, last a few hours and then disappears. It is difficult to diagnose unless your physician is alert to this relatively common condition. I suggest you visit your family chiropractor. He deals with "Slipped Ribs" on a daily basis and can relieve your mental concern as well.

Born August 24, 1918 in Manila, The Philippines, he was a graduate of Princeton University with a major in architecture. After serving in the Marine Corps during World War II, he moved to Carmel and with Thomas Elston set up the architectural firm of Elston and Cranston.

In 1963 the firm was given a merit award by the Northern California and East Bay chapters of the American Institute of Architects for the design of Carmel Middle School (then known as Carmel Junior High School). They also designed Thomas Hayes Elementary School at Fort Ord; Carmel River School; much of Carmel High and Tularcitos School; the S.F.B. Morse lecture hall and several classrooms at the Monterey Institute of International Studies; and the Marina Shopping Center.

Mr. Cranston moved to Santa Rosa in 1980, where he worked as a self-employed architect until his death.

He was a member and past president of the Carmel Rotary Club and a recipient of the Club's Harris Fellow Award; past president of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; and a member of the Carmel Valley Master Plan committee.

Survivors include his wife, Gloria of Santa Rosa; two sons, Lewis and Curtis, both of Santa Rosa; one daughter, Janice Burke of Monterey; and a brother, Harry of Kensington.

At his request, no funeral services took place.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the donor's favorite charity.

She is survived by her husband of 45 years, Maurice; a daughter, Michele of Menlo Park; a son, Victor of Monterey; and two sisters, Joan Manning of Hopland and Doris Velde of Missoula, Mont.

Adolf C. Lafrenz

Private services took place for Adolf Charles Lafrenz who died June 21 in Carmel. He was 89.

Born April 5, 1897 in San Francisco, he was the husband of the late Hallie Samson, who died in 1984. They came to Carmel in the early 1920s from San Francisco, moving their importing business, The Der Ling Company. They were active in community, local business and real estate affairs, and were among the first members of the Monterey Peninsula Country Club and the Carmel Art Association.

Many early fairy tale Carmel cottages were designed and built by the Lafrenzes, including Cottages-by-the-Sea on San Antonio in Carmel.

Survivors include two nieces, Jean Mitchell of Carmel and Sally MacBride of Woodside, and a nephew, George Booth of Carmel.

Cremation took place at the Little Chapel by-the-Sea with the Paul Mortuary in charge of arrangements.

The family suggests memorial contributions to the Carmel-by-the-Sea Garden Club, P.O. Box 1971, Carmel 93921.

Do you have difficulty swallowing pills and capsules? Writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. J.A. Brown gives tips on solving the problem. Place a tablet in your mouth with a small quantity of water, tilt your head backward and swallow. For a capsule, says the doctor, tilt your head or your upper body forward as you begin to drink. The capsule, which is lighter than water, will float to the back of your throat where it can be swallowed more easily.

Laurel and Hardy fans convene in Carmel as 'Sons of the Desert'

By ANNE PAPINEAU

THE MEETING IS DECLARED open with toasts to Babe, to Stan, to Charlie Hall, Mae Busch and James "The Fin" Finlayson.

Adults crowned with red "Sons of the Desert" fezzes observe a screening of the film of the same name, their laughter at times drowning out the dialogue. No one seems to mind that the movie is more than 50 years old.

ARTS & LEISURE

Belly laughs of equal magnitude greet a showing of The Music Box, an Academy Award-winning short subject produced in 1932 that has just been Colorized — its black and white images converted to color by computer. This group, assembled in the Toots Lagoon backroom on Dolores Street in Carmel, is the first to view the newly Colorized comedy classic.

Laughter, reminiscence, dining, socializing and more laughter — these are the characteristics of a typical gathering of the Midnight Patrol "tent" of Sons of the Desert.

The Sons of the Desert is an appreciation society, not to be confused with fan club, whose members share a common interest in the films of Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. There are tents the world over. Each takes its name from one of the dozens of movies that starred the two late comics. A tent established in a Connecticut prison is named, appropriately enough "Pardon Us."

Stan Laurel himself helped establish the charter of the society, issuing the edict that the Sons of the Desert maintain "a half-assed dignity."

A half-assed dignity pervaded the most recent gathering of the Midnight Patrol in Carmel. The tent, whose Grand Shiek Bill Cassara is also a Monterey County sheriff, is two years old and most of its members younger than the movies that punctuate their meetings.

The tent was founded by a group of local law enforcement officers who laid the groundwork for Midnight Patrol at Perko's Koffee Kup in Castroville. That restaurant provided a central rallying site for the officers who gathered from Monterey County points north, south and east.

They proclaimed their tent "Midnight Patrol" in honor of the 1933 Laurel and Hardy film about two conscientious but inept policemen. But today the Midnight Patrol members come from many walks of life, their common bond being the ability to enjoy the humor of the comedic twosome.

Guest of honor at the dinner meeting was Tony Hawes, whose wife, Lois, is Stan Laurel's only child. A bout of the flu prevented Lois from attending the Carmel meeting herself.

The Hawes met at a Sons of the Desert convention in Hollywood, where Tony "proposed across the swimming pool" to Lois, now his wife of six years.

British-born like Stan Laurel, Hawes first met the film stars when he was 17 and a cartoonist for a London newspaper. In the '50s he switched professions from cartoonist to comedy writer, the career he still pursues. Hawes encountered Laurel and Hardy again when he wrote a radio show for them, and admits "I absolutely adored them."

SONS OF THE DESERT, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy's movie spoof of fraternal clubs, is also the title of the international appreciation society for Stan and Ollie's films. Monterey County boasts its own Sons of the Desert "tent," The Midnight Patrol, which gathers regularly in Carmel.

The Hal Roach Studios in Hollywood, the wellspring for the "golden age" Laurel and Hardy films, recently converted their award-winning film, The Music Box, to color.

According to Hawes, the Colorized video will go on sale Sept. 1. But last month he brought a copy to the Midnight Patrol meeting, noting "You are the first group of people to see it. Not even the company directors have seen it yet."

In The Music Box Stan and Ollie are movers whose task it is to transport an upright piano to a home perched high on a hill. With faultless timing they carry, and recarry, the boxed instrument up an interminable flight of steps — along the way encountering such comedic personages as Billy Gilbert, a top-hatted professor who insists they remove the piano from his path.

Free summer entertainment returns to Forest Theater

A CARMEL TRADITION continues with the July 6 return of the Sunday Afternoon Concert Series at the Outdoor Forest Theater.

Admission is free to the series, set in the historic pine-bedecked theater on Mountain View Avenue and Santa Rita Street. All programs begin at 2 p.m., but for the enterprising, the fun can start earlier. Theatergoers are encouraged to bring a picnic lunch and dine outdoors prior to the afternoon presentations.

The series is sponsored by the Carmel Community Cultural Commission and the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Following is the 1986 schedule of programs:

■ July 6, Scottish Dance Group. The Scottish Country Dancers of the Monterey Peninsula open the series with a rendition of jigs, reels and strathspeys — the traditional social dances of Scotland. Rousing pipe tunes accompany the dancers, who are also versed in the sword dance, Highland fling and Irish jig.

■ July 13, Western Pacific Bluegrass Band. Formerly known as the Bear Creek Boys, the band first appeared at the Forest Theater three years ago. Their special appeal lies in performing classic country songs by greats like Hank Williams and Bob Wills as well as the bluegrass sounds of Bill Monroe and Flat and Scruggs.

■ July 20, The Cypressaires. The Cypressaires represent the Monterey Peninsula in the Society for the Preservation of and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America, the largest all-male singing organization in the world. This 60-member ensemble performs "tear jerkers" and "gutbusters" as only the barbershoppers can do them, in four-part harmony.

■ July 27, GroveMont Theater. Marcia Gambrell Hovick directs this interpretation of the classic Little Red Riding Hood. Children of all ages are invited to observe the familiar characters, including the Wolf, the Woodsman, Grandmother, Mother, the Cat and of course, Little Red Riding Hood.

■ Aug. 3, El Mariachi Mixtlan. This company has become a regular at the Forest Theater Sunday Afternoon Concert Series, playing to standing ovations. They have twice toured Mexico and have appeared on international television. The troupe has attended the Tucson International Mariachi Conference for the past four years and have performed throughout California.

El Mariachi Mixtlan wear traditional "traje de mariachi," complete with botonadura, sombrero de charro and Reservations are encouraged. For details call the alliance office in Monterey, 372-5102.

Independence Day celebrated numerous ways

A 20-FOOT REPLICA of the Statue of Liberty, a pancake breakfast and major fireworks shows are among the Fourth of July celebration choices served on the Monterey Peninsula this Friday.

There may be plenty of celebration in New York this July 4, but the Monterey Business Association is sponsoring one heck of a patriotic party in downtown Monterey on Alvarado Street.

John Rousseau and Lance Jacobson of the GroveMont Theater Arts Center constructed a 20-foot replica of the Statue of Liberty for the event, and 100-year-old Flora Van Artsdale will be the special guest of the day.

The faire is scheduled 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday and is free. Food and merchant booths will line each side of Alvarado Street and the Doubletree Plaza to the opposite end of the Pearl Street intersection.

Entertainment will be featured at three stage areas. Comedian Chicago Steve will serve as master of ceremonies.

On a stage located in the Bonifacio Plaza, the following acts will entertain: Peggy Nisbet and Scott Brown, sponsored by the Carmel Mission Inn, will perform a tribute to Kate Smith; and the Roger Eddy Jazz Group, sponsored by the Monterey Sheraton, the Greg Morrison Country Band, and Illuminati also will play on the Bonifacio stage.

On a stage located next to the Chamber of Commerce, the rock band Double Dare and the Dixieland band Bye Bye Blues Boys will perform.

Scheduled for entertainment at the Doubletree Plaza is the Monterey Community Band directed by Heinrich Bender, and the Monterey Bay Gymnastics team directed by Theresa Brulc.

There also will be children's entertainment including the Story Creek Critters Puppet Show and the Mitchell Barrett Comedy Show.

Japanese dragon dancers and The Liberty Marching Trio also will perform throughout the day.

IN SEASIDE, the day's activities begin at 7 a.m. at Oldemeyer Center on Hilby Avenue with the annual pancake breakfast put on by the Seaside Lions Club. Breakfast will conclude at 10:30 a.m.

The Seaside Parade of Champions will begin at noon. The formation area will be on Fremont from Birch to LaSalle avenues with the start of the parade at Fremont and Birch.

It will proceed south on Fremont to Hilby Avenue, where the main reviewing stand and judging will be. The dispersing area will be from Hilby to Kimball avenues at Fremont. There will be no parking on Fremont southbound lanes until after the parade. Parking on Fremont northbound will be permitted.

The parade will be lead by police and fire units of the Monterey Peninsula communities, cars with dignitaries, mounted units, drill teams, drum corps, floats and antique cars.

THE GREG MORRISON BAND is part of the entertainment line-up at Friday's patriotic party on Alvarado Street in downtown Monterey. Admission is free to the fair, scheduled 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The parade will be highlighted by the appearance of the Edmonton Crusaders' 100-piece youth band from Edmonton, Canada. The Crusaders youth band not only will appear in the parade but will be one of several other youth bands that will perform in field competition on Saturday, July 5 at the Seaside High School football field.

After the parade there will be further activities held at Oldmeyer Center with entertainment, barbecues and the presentation of parade awards to all participants.

The grand parade marshall will be Mae Johnson, principal of the King Middle School.

THE PUBLIC is invited to a Fourth of July celebration at Fort Ord's football stadium from 8 to 10 p.m. Friday. The celebration is organized by the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce and Fort Ord and it is being paid for by the cities of Monterey, Marina, Sand City, Seaside, Del Rey Oaks, Pacific Grove and Carmel. A sing-along concert by the 7th Infantry Division (Light) Band, a salute to the Statue of Liberty and a fireworks display are slated for the evening.

Admission to the stadium is free, but it seats only 8,000. Overflow seating for the fireworks display will be in the surrounding parking areas. No tickets are necessary, but seats are first-come, first-served.

Visitors are asked to enter Fort Ord through the Main, 12th street, Coe, Imjin or Broadway gates with their headlights on. From the gates, they will be directed to the parking areas by signs and police. It is suggested that the public come early and bring chairs and blankets for their comfort. Master musicians perform during Hidden Valley series

HIDDEN VALLEY Theatre provides an intimate setting for three Masters Festival chamber music ensemble concerts to be presented on the Fourth of July weekend. Julius Baker, Jonathan Feldman, Stephen Geber and Daniel Majeske will perform in the Carmel Valley theater.

Offerings by these chamber music players will include two works for violin, cello and piano: Brahms' Trio in B Major, Opus 8 and Schubert's Trio in B Flat Major, Opus 99. Beethoven's Serenade in D Major, Opus 25 will be performed on flute, violin and cello. Bach's Trio Sonata in C Minor from "The Musical Offering" will also be included.

The Brahms and Beethoven works will be presented in Concert I at 4 p.m. Friday, July 4 and again at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, July 6; the Bach and the Schubert, in Concert II at 8 p.m. Saturday, July 5.

Julius Baker, artistic director of the Masters Festival, is world-renowned as a concert flutist. The former solo flutist of the New York Philharmonic performed earlier this year in a duo-recital with Jean-Pierre Rampal in Carnegie Hall, their first joint recital since the 1983 Masters Festival.

Daniel Majeske, concertmaster, and Stephen Geber, principal cellist, both of the Cleveland Orchestra, will make their first Masters Festival appearance. Majeske has served as concertmaster of the 1976 Cassals Festival in Puerto Rico. Gever was previously a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and has appeared as a soloist with the Boston Pops. Both belong to the Cleveland Orchestra's string quartet which has performed recently at Tanglewood and has recorded on the Telarc label.

Hidden Valley also welcomes pianist Jonathan Feldman, known as an accompanist, ensemble player and soloist. Feldman performs regularly with the New York Philharmonic and has been a member of its chamber ensemble in Europe and the Far East.

Advance purchase of the $10 concert tickets is advised. Tickets are available from the Hidden Valley box office, 659-3115, and the following Monterey Peninsula outlets: Countrywide Crafts, The Barnyard, Carmel; How To Do Anything Bookstore, Lobos Court, Carmel; Abinante Music Store, 425 Alvarado, Monterey; Prim and Proper, 533 Lighthouse Ave., Pacific Grove; and Jim Gattis, 315 S. Obon Festival celebrates multi-faceted Japanese culture

THE ANNUAL Obon Festival sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Buddhist Temple will be presented Saturday and Sunday, July 5-6, at the Monterey Fairgrounds, Fairgrounds and Garden roads in Monterey.

The word "obon" signifies deliverance from suffering and is a Buddhist religious festival. To thousands of peninsulans, however, the festival offers an opportunity to share in Japanese-style feasting and culture.

Such Japanese treats as tempura, sushi, sashimi, teriyaki, noodles and even all-American hot dogs will be available for consumption. Japanese beer and sake will also be available at refreshment stands.

Exhibits will include traditional Ikebana flower arrangements and hundreds of bonsai trees, some more than 150 years old and as small as three inches.

The legend of Obon comes from a Buddhist tale called the "Ullavana sutra." The legend tells of a Buddhist monk, Moggallana, who was the Buddha's closest disciple, whose mother during her earthly life was a wretchedly selfish woman. When she died she went to the hell of starvation.

Her son, being a highly evolved soul, was able to see into the beyond — a mixed blessing in his case, since what he saw was his mother in great pain, shriveled to mere skin and bones. Every time she tried to eat, her food burst into flames.

Moggallana in his grief hastened to the Buddha who advised him to invite the villagers and monks to a feast of atonement for his mother.

As a result of this good deed, Moggallana's mother was raised from the hell of starvation into a more tolerable sphere. Upon seeing this, Moggallana danced for joy, in company with his fellow disciples. Thus began the festival of Obon and the dances that are an important part of it.

About 200 kimono-clad dancers will participate in the Obon dances, 100 of them from the peninsula, the others from Japanese-American communities in Salinas and Watsonville.

Demonstration times during the 1986 Obon Festival are as follows:

SATURDAY, JULY 5

- 2 p.m., bonsai demonstration, Monterey Bonsai Club
- 4 p.m., koto, Japanese harp performance by the Nishikado Masadhizu-Kai
- 6 p.m., classical Japanese dance, Bando Mitsuhiro-Kai
- 7:30 p.m., Obon dancing, outdoors
- 8:30 p.m., martial arts demonstration, Aikido of Monterey

SUNDAY, JULY 6

- 2 p.m., flower arrangement, demonstration by Ohara School
- 4 p.m., classical Japanese dance, Fujima Misuzu-Kai
- 6 p.m., popular Japanese songs, Monterey Kayo Club
- 7:30 p.m., Obon dancing, outdoors
- 8:30 p.m., drawing.

For additional information about the Obon Festival, call 394-2111, evenings.

Midnight Patrolers pay tribute to Laurel and Hardy

When Stan and Ollie suggest he just walk around, he blurts, "What! Walk around? Me, Professor Theodore von Schwarzenhoffen, M.D., A.D., D.D.S., F.L.D., F.F.F. and F."

Tony and Lois Hawes correspond with Sons of the Desert members the world over, and Tony was informed of a curious rumor that cropped up in England — that Stan Laurel is the real father of Clint Eastwood.

"It was published in the London Daily Mirror," Hawes noted.

The video-editing skills of the Midnight Patrol Grand Shiek are put to the test during the screenings that are a staple of meetings. Cassara strives to introduce a theme to the film clips. Preceding a screening of Sons of the Desert were visions of Ronald Reagan explaining breathily why he couldn't attend and how much he always enjoyed Laurel and Hardy's "Who's on First" routine, and a movie musical number that focused on a fez-twirling chorine.

Sons of the Desert depicts an imaginary fraternal order. As members, Stan and Ollie vow they will attend their group's annual convention in Chicago, and they do so with their wives believing they have taken a doctor-prescribed trip to Hawaii for Ollie's health.

Word arrives late to the boys that their ship "sank" while they were attending the convention, and their concocted story grows ever more convoluted.

The Midnight Patrol welcomes new members who share appreciation of Laurel and Hardy's humor. The annual fee affords Midnight Patrolers an official membership card, subscription to the Midnight Patrol newsletter, the nationally published Intra-Tent Journal and other benefits.

For more information about The Midnight Patrol, write the organization at P.O. Box 222512, Carmel, 93922.

Monterey ceremonies recreate Commodore Sloat's local landing

SATURDAY, JULY 5 will mark the 140th anniversary of the raising of the American flag in Monterey on July 7, 1846. It also marks the 100th anniversary of commemorative events first celebrated on July 7, 1886.

On July 7, 1846 Commodore John Drake Sloat, U.S.N., commanding the U.S.S. Savannah, landed 150 sailors and Marines, raised the American flag and proclaimed California to be a part of the United States of America. By this act, the United States gained 600,000 square miles of territory, equal to an area the size of France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, England and Italy.

There will be two ceremonies. The first will be at the Sloat Monument, on a hill overlooking the Monterey yacht harbor in the Presidio of Monterey. This ceremony will begin at 1 p.m. and will feature the 7th Infantry Division Band, Fort Ord, providing music followed by a narration describing the monument.

Wreaths will be laid on the monument by representatives of the armed services. These are presented by the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution and the Masonic Lodge of California. A 21-gun salute to the United States will be fired by the 7th Infantry Division Saluting Battery.

A second ceremony will begin at 2 p.m. at the Custom House Plaza Monterey, at the entrance to Fisherman's Wharf. Following music by the 7th Infantry Division Band, introductions and a history of events leading to Sloat's landing, Commodore Sloat's orders and proclamation will be read by Admiral Robert Shumaker, superintendent of the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey.

These events are cosponsored by the Monterey History and Art Association, Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the Navy League, the Joseph Stilwell Chapter of the Association of United States Army and the City of Monterey.

Admission is free and all are welcome to attend the ceremonies.

ART NOTES
BY SAM COLBURN

Galloping tintypes

WITHOUT DOUBT the motion picture is the great medium of our time. More people look at films either in theaters or on television than read books, see plays, go to exhibits of painting, drawing, or sculpture, or follow the funnies.

I remember the early days of the "flickers." It was a time of innocence and rapture. I used to go to the movie house on Saturday in Glendale for the matinee performance. They served William S. Hart and peanut brittle. Bessie Love was around as were madcap Mabel Normand and Theda Bara, the vamp. Hart was steely eyed, noble and relentless, establishing a prototype for straight-shooting Western heroes. It was a time for saving young ladies who had been bound to the railroad tracks, or rescuing them from a Fate Worse Than Death.

It was also a time for high comedy, or perhaps low is a better word. Mack Sennett and his Keystone Kops were the artisans of slapstick. We graduated from that into a more subtle humor. Charlie Chaplin was the king of comics but there were others, each one individual. Harold Lloyd thought it very funny to hang from the hands of a giant clock high on a tower. There was Buster Keaton, whose face remained frozen in any crisis. Harry Langdon had a plastic face which moved delicately under life stresses. Later we had Laurel and Hardy and their fall-apart car.

All of this passed, and there does not seem to be much to be funny about anymore. There have been a few epics since their time like The Party or La Cage aux Folles, and, of course, Mr. Hulot's Holiday done by Jacque Tati that I view as the funniest of all time. Through all this flowing of film, the Western evolved into a sophisticated genre. Westerns are even made abroad, and must be hilarious.

When I was in high school, my father lent a double-breasted red vest to a young man named Marion Morrison, so that he could wear it in a play. He also played football, and was called "Duke." He was so big I don't know how he buttoned the vest as it had been tailor-made for my dad who was a much smaller man. When he graduated he went to the University of Southern California. Upon emerging from that institution, he went into the movies and became the hero of many Westerns. In this career he was known as John Wayne.

At one time I lived in that "city of streets and stars" called Hollywood. When a big movie was first shown it usually opened at Graumann's Chinese Theatre. On such evenings searchlights probed the skies. Thousands of people lined Hollywood Boulevard just to catch a glimpse of the stars riding by in their glorious chariots. The leads in the film impressed their hands in wet cement in the courtyard of the theatre.

We are a society conditioned and affected by the movies and by the people who act in this medium. If you are an actor, are smart, and say your lines well, you may even become president of the United States or Mayor of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

THE PACIFIC Grove Art Center has a function in art on this peninsula which is very important. Artists who are either known or unknown apply for shows. They may be accepted or turned down, but I have seen, over a number of years, works that I would not have been able to observe in any other local institution.

At present there are three artists with one-man or one-woman shows. I am familiar with the "Visual Stimulation" offered by Ray Magsalay. This is a very large and comprehensive collection of assemblages, painting and three-dimensional forms. It is very hard to label his work. Let me say that he is presenting the American Indian philosophy through these pieces. Some of the works in picture format are quite surreal and do not, for me at least, give any feeling of the West. The frames are part of the picture area. This is a very large show. Ray is bursting with images. These visual thoughts must have taken many hours of painstaking work to take shape. Nothing that he does is haphazard. Not only that, but the material used comes from such varied sources. It is more than "rag, a bone and a hank of hair." There are skulls, fur, feathers, pieces of wood, the head of a skinned coyote, plus his own painting and sculpture.

In the halls of the Pacific Grove Art Center are the paintings of Robin Brunn. Born in Carmel, she now lives in Sebastopol, but lived for a while in India where she is known as Shivani. Robin paints in acrylic. The subject is developed in bands of color which induce a rhythmic design. I realize that she is working out a technique to express her mysticism. I think the artist should go to the subject matter for the spiritual. Her "Still Waltzing" achieves a movement through time by using shapes very reminiscent of Monument Valley.

Clancy Cavnar is showing in the Elmarie Dyke Gallery at the Center. These are paintings in oil, and oil and wax, and are of animals from some netherworld. I liked "Flash Flood" which is done in somber colors. It gives the feeling of rushing water and fear. "Shephard" is a satirical work of sheep guarding sheep in a broken down Greece. His "Angel" has a volcano in her tummy.

IT WAS A surpreme delight to be able to go to the massive show of Les Impressionists at the de Young Museum in San Francisco. What struck me immediately were the excerpts from critiques by writers at that time. These guys had really incisive minds. Phrases like "What are these tongue lickings in the lower righthand corner." These nasty remarks are posted alongside the paintings of artists who have since that time achieved immortality. It shows you what blind eyes critics may have. Nothing that I have ever read by any West Coast critic, at least, even approaches these articulate and devastating remarks.

I would like to cover this exhibit in much more detail at a later time. What strikes me is the consistent attempt of these artists to see something beautiful in life. Many of the artists of today are either trying to be striking or see with very angry eyes.

All of the paintings by the impressionists are from a series of eight exhibitions. The last work you see on leaving is "Apple Picking, 1886." This is a very large and very beautiful painting by Camille Pissarro. The color "works" so well. It is soft and it is harmonious.
